Coughlin Off To Townsend Parley, Gives Speech Today

Priest 'Changes Mind' as Split Over 3d Party Issue Widens.

Takes Lake Boat; Delegates Excited

Pensioners' Faction at Cleveland Shuns Link to Lemke Group.

By Felix Bruner.

Cleveland, July 15.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, head of the Union for Social Justice and outstanding lambaster of the New Deal, threw the Townsend national convention into a furor tonight by a telegram announcing that he was on a boat headed across Lake Erie for Cleveland and would address the convention tomorrow.

Although Coughlin had been invited to speak, it had been generally reported that he would not appear. It was said tonight that his sudden decision was brought about by the appearance of a strong feeling among seekers after $200-a-month pensions for everybody over 60 years old that they were not sure that they wanted to have anything to do with a third party.

The convention already appears to be split high, wide and handsome over the third party issue. Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the movement and messiah of the pension seekers, has left no doubt in the minds of anyone about where he stands. He is against Roosevelt. But there is a strong faction in the convention—including some of the leaders and some of the citizens maximi, the new aristocracy of the Townsend movement—which wants none of any third party.

Fear Party Break.

Among these are Representative Martin F. Smith (Democrat), Washington, temporary chairman of the convention and candidate for re-election to Congress; Otto A. Case, a Democratic candidate for Governor of Washington; Sheridan Downey, counsel for the Townsend organization and a Democratic candidate for Congress in California, and Gomer Smith, Townsend big-shot, who was a Democratic candidate for nomination for the Senate in Oklahoma. There is no question of their loyalty to the Townsend movement, but they are not ready to desert the Democratic Party, which constitutes their only chance of being elected to office.

Townsend is reported to be ready and willing to declare for a third party. He apparently is ready now to support the candidacy of William Lemke on the Union Party ticket. Lemke will address the convention here Sunday.

Not only are active candidates for office opposing indorsement, but so are other delegates. Representatives of nine Southern States held a caucus tonight and voted their opposition to fusing the Townsend movement with any political party. They expressed some opposition to the New Deal, but reached the conclusion that their main chance remained with the Democrats.

New Board Meets.

The citizens maximi also were holding a meeting tonight, but it was described as only a routine organization session. The citizens maximi include a Townsendite from each of 41 States. While the organization still is closely managed, they are expected eventually to become the rulers of the Townsend movement. Beginning next year, each State is expected to elect a citizen maximus. The present ones are appointed. Who invented the title is a mystery.

Townsend lambasted President Roosevelt before a shirt-sleeved, suspendered audience in Public Auditorium this afternoon. The huge hall was almost filled. Hotel lobbies were crowded with men in shirt sleeves and women in print dresses. The scene was a contrast with the Republican convention, which closed here a month ago. There are no bands, no whoopee—the barrooms are almost deserted. But there is much earnest conversation. The delegates paid their own way to the convention—most of

Branded Girl Fails to Identify Pair in Crucial Test of Charges

'Complete Expose' of Torture Story Promised Today as Alleged Attack Victim Falters in Effort to Pick Two Men From Line-up.

A "complete expose" of the torture story told by Margaret Louise Bell, self-styled victim of a New York vice ring, was promised today by investigators after the 21-year-old girl failed last night to identify the two men she said figured in an attack on her.

Twitching nervously and clutching at her flowered dress, the auburn-haired young woman sat in a police line-up room while the two men she named—Leo Marmome, 34, and Joe Silver, 36, both of Brooklyn, N. Y.—stood among five other prisoners beneath glaring lights of the "show-up platform."

Her face was expressionless as Capt. Ira Keck, assistant detective chief, hurled questions at the men. As each suspect spoke in turns, she scanned their faces but showed no signs of recognition.

Then she was asked if she could identify any man in the line-up as the one or ones she saw last Saturday night at the Hanger Club. The girl shook her head. She suddenly changed her mind, however, and that the second man from the end (Silver) resembled one of those she had seen.

For nearly ten minutes, detectives flung questions at her. She finally said she "wasn't sure enough" to swear bfore a grand

President Host For Adm. Byrd; Pilots Vessel

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Schooner Liberty, off Maine, July 15.—After a visit to Seal Cove for luncheon with Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, President Roosevelt and his sailing sons steered the schooner Sewanna around Mount Desert Island this afternoon and anchored in the sheltered waters of Seal Harbor for the night.

In an old blue sweater and wrinkled white hat, the President took the helm of the white-hulled yacht soon after breakfast.

With a stiff northwest wind, he sailed southwestward, out of the islands surrounding Bucks Harbor, South Brooksville, and then northeast into Seal Cove, on the southwestern part of Mount Desert.

There, under a warm Maine sun, the President received on board Admiral Byrd, his 15-year-old son, "Dick," and the explorer's dog, Iceberg. The Byrd's have a summer camp at Lattys Cove, on the island.

Mrs. Byrd and her three daughters, Helen, Katherine and Bolling, went aboard to pay a courtesy call but did not remain for lunch.

Also at the dining table was Commodore A. B. Randall, of the United States Lines, who now commands the liner Manhattan. Capt. Randall went aboard from the Presidential yacht Potomac, which is escorting the Sewanna with the destroyer Hopkins.

After lunch newspapermen aboard the schooner Liberty could see, through binoculars, the vacationing Chief Executive throw over a fishing line. He caught two flounders, Secretary Marvin M. McIntyre later reported.

Report Favors U. S. Dirigibles For Sea Route

Plan Unit Urges 2 Giant Craft to Give Regular Service to Europe.

Construction of two giant dirigibles for transoceanic service through the assistance of Federal subsidies and the co-operation of the Navy Department was urged yesterday by the Air Commerce planning committee of the Business Advisory Council for the Department of Commerce.

Citing the record of the Graf Zeppelin and the fact that "not a single commercial passenger in lighter-than-aircraft has ever been killed or injured"—all casualties taking place in military or naval airships—the report submitted by the committee to Secretary Roper recommended "Government encouragement toward the development of lighter-than-air ships as a commercial proposition carried on by private enterprise."

The necessary private capital for a transatlantic airship company could be obtained, the committee declared, if the American Government "manifests its interest in the project by providing adequate subsidy for American builders." A system of subsidies similar to that used in the construction of the Merchant Marine was suggested.

Other recommendations in the long-range dirigible program advocated by the committee include:

Construction of two large rigid airships suitable for trans-oceanic operations to alternate with two foreign airships in giving regular service.

Construction of Atlantic Coast commercial operating facilities for trans-oceanic airships. Among the possible locations for an airship terminal in this country, air officials usually include the Hybla Valley area.

Negotiation of a reciprocal agree-

American Held in German Jail For Alleged Insult to Nazi Chief

By the Associated Press.

Nurnberg, Germany, July 15.—A short German word—"lump"—has kept Ludwig Hoffmann, of Chicago, German-born American citizen, in jail for a fortnight, United States diplomatic inquiries disclosed today.

Hoffmann, authoritative sources said, was arrested July 1 because he allegedly applied the word to Julius Streicher, Nazidom's leading anti-Semite and publisher of the Stuermer, during a Bavarian beer festival.

Intervention of the consul general in Berlin with the ministry of justice may, however, clear up the case quickly.

The prosecuting attorney said he was willing to recommend leniency for Hoffmann if the defendant can show he did not know at the time what he was saying.

"Lump" can mean anything from a simple rapscallion to an epithet regarded in the United States as a fighting word.

Nurnberg is Streicher's home town, moreover.

The incident was not mentioned in German newspapers, but nevertheless served to bring Streicher and his anti-Jewish program into more lively discussion.

Rightly or wrongly, many Jews believe a new anti-Semitic drive may be expected after the Olympics and regret any incident which might be likely to irritate Streicher.

For a time the anti-Semitic propaganda in the Reich appeared to be falling into the background. Bulletin boards bearing the Stuermer, a weekly newspaper, began to disappear and there even was talk the paper itself might be suppressed.

It continued to appear regularly, however, and in Jewish circles, at least, there is a firm belief more drastic anti-Jewish measures are coming in September.

Hoffmann, who might, authorities said, face a charge of villifying a public figure, was born in Nurnberg in 1905, lived in Chicago for some time and returned to Germany to visit relatives.

Garnett Gets Spy Evidence From Hoover

Standley Says Protest to Japanese Hinges on Trial Result.

Speedy indictment by the grand jury of former Lieut. Comdr. John S. Farnsworth, accused of having sold American naval secrets to the Japanese, was indicated last night when it was learned the Federal Bureau of Investigation has turned over all evidence in its possession to District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

Far-reaching revision of the Navy's battle fleet tactics, a diplomatic protest demanding the withdrawal of a member of the Japanese diplomatic corps and the unveiling of widespread espionage activity in the country, with possible arrests of other persons, may result from Farnsworth's trial.

These three possibilities were admitted yesterday by Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of Navy, at a press conference at which the arrest of the 43-year-old officer who was court-martialed out of the Navy nine years ago, was discussed.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, refused to comment last night on the report Department of Justice agents had obtained a signed confession from Farnsworth in which he admitted having turned over numerous Navy photographs and a copy of the book, "Service and Information and Security," to agents of the Japanese government.

Hoover admitted all evidence gathered by his agents in the year that they shadowed the former naval officer and in the afternoon and night in which they held him for questioning was not disclosed when Farnsworth was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage Tuesday morning.

Garnett Has Evidence.

"Whether Farnsworth has told other people the things he told us, I don't know," said Hoover. "We've turned over all our evidence to the United States district attorney."

The head of the Bureau of Investigation revealed Farnsworth had been arrested by Justice agents agents Monday afternoon, and not early Tuesday morning, as has been generally supposed. Throughout that afternoon, evening and night Farnsworth was subjected to the most rigorous questioning—a grilling that has wrung admittances of guilt from healthier and more strongly willed men than the former naval officer, who shook like a leaf when he was arraigned.

In discussing the case with newspapermen at his regular Wednesday morning press conference, Admiral Standley seemed wary and took great care in framing his replies.

Asked whether the information which Farnsworth is accused of having sold to the Japanese may force changes in confidential fleet instructions, whether representations are to be made to the Japanese government and whether other suspects are being tracked by Naval Intelligence officers and Justice agents, Admiral Standley replied that the Navy's future actions will hinge upon the disclosures and outcome of the Farnsworth trial.

Hearing Set July 29.

Farnsworth, who, when arraigned, pleaded not guilty to the charges, and begged to be taken to the hospital, is being held in the infirmary of the District Jail on $10,000 bail for a preliminary hearing on July 29. Indications yesterday were, however, that the Navy and Justice Departments will seek an indictment before that date.

The former naval officer is specifically accused of having turned over to the Japanese the contents of "The Service of Information and Security," a volume on fleet tactics, containing confidential instructions on the scouting of airplanes and aircraft carriers, the disposition and maneuverings of ships, screening and other ship movements.

Asked whether the contents of the book might necessitate changes in fleet tactics, Standley replied: "Publications of that kind are always on trial in the fleet and are constantly being changed. If trial and evidence shows that certain publications have been violated or jeopardized and have a bearing on fleet operations, changes would probably be made."

Originally written in 1916 by Rear Admiral William S. Pye, the book has been revised several times. One edition of the book, Standley recalled, was not marked confidential when issued, but what edition of the volume Farnsworth is accused of having betrayed to the

Ex-Star of Radio Broke, Asks Job

New York, July 15 (AP).—Norman Brokenshire, former radio announcer, the World Telegram said today, is looking for a WPA job after living a hermit's life in a Long Island cabin since last March.

Brokenshire, described as once the highest paid radio announcer in the country, said he would do any work the WPA gave him.

"I built this cabin when I was making a big salary," he said. "Now I can't even afford electricity here. I use oil lamps."

The man who saluted his radio audience with 'How do you do, ladies and gentlemen, how do you do," was quoted by the newspaper as saying he had a new lease of life and at 36 wanted to try new fields.

844 Carloads of Food, Feed and $624,000 Subsistence Sped.

Fodder Problem Called One of Distribution; Markets Soar.

Succor in the form of food, feed and money was moving to the despairing hosts of the drought-ravaged Central and Southern States last night.

The AAA revealed that 844 carloads of food and feed had been shipped to ten States by the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation. It was being given to State relief agencies, without charge, for distribution. The States receiving the products were Georgia, Kentucky, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Caroiina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Virginia and Wyoming. Food and feed already were being distributed in Arkansas, Colorado, North Carolina and Texas.

At the same time the Resettlement Administration made initial allotments of $624,000 for subsistence grants to destitute families in seven States. The allocations were: Tennessee, $125,000; Kentucky, $125,000; Alabama, $75,000; Georgia, $125,000; South Carolina, $90,000; Oklahoma, $75,000, and Virginia, $9,000. Six Northwestern States already had been granted $393,000 with assurance of more as soon as the RA could check their needs.

The allocations announced yesterday were approved on Tuesday night before Administrator Rexford Guy Tugwell left for North Dakota to take personal charge of the relief work in the Northwest.

Feed Supply Adequate.

Meanwhile, Government officials revealed the livestock feed problem appeared to be largely one of distribution. Supplies on a national basis were believed to be adequate for all needs, with the surplus in some sections needing only to be transported to those areas in need.

The Federal Crop Reporting Board, following a survey, said that the carryover of feed grains on farms was about normal and the carryover of hay was the largest since 1928.

"Instead of the drastic reduction in numbers of livestock that occurred in 1934," the report said, "it now seems probable that the shortage of grain will not be so severe as to prevent a material increase in hog numbers and a moderate increase in chickens in 1936."

Emergency rating was given yesterday to 7 counties in Colorado and 17 additional counties in Oklahoma by the Drought Relief Committee here, headed by Jesse W. Tapp.

Corn Crop Not Lost.

The bulk of the corn crop still can be saved, the Weather Bureau said in the course of the day, if rain and cooler weather come. In the weekly weather and crop bulletin, the bureau said that so far the greatest permanent damage to the corn crop had occurred in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. In some parts of southern Ohio a portion of the crop is beyond help, while there has been some deterioration in other parts of the State. North central Kentucky and Indiana also report deterioration. Permanent damage to some extent has been felt in Nebraska and South Dakota, while the bulk of the crop in Iowa is still in fair condition.

The spring wheat crop was suffering rapid deterioration, but harvesting of the winter wheat was practically completed.

Markets Up Again.

The Associated Press reported numerous developments in the Midwest:

"Bull" market operations in grain futures were resumed at Chicago, running up prices sharply on sensational crop damage reports from Canada and trade assertions that the domestic corn crop was "hanging in the balance."

In Kansas City wheat and corn rose the maximum permitted for one session, 5 and 4 cents, respectively, while in Chicago the same cereals were up more than 4 and 3 cents.

Many traders said the buying movement apparently was based on keen disappointment in some quarters over failure of substantial immediate drought relief to materialize. Reports from Kansas City said millers were buying all the wheat in sight there. Canadian advices predicted crop failure over wide

Beverly Hills, Calif., July 15.—Toward dawn today someone called Polly Moran's husband "Mr. Polly Moran"—and shortly thereafter the chunky, apple-cheeked movie comedianne was "screamin' bloody murder" as she looked down the cold blue nose of a pistol.

She said her husband, Martin Malone, athletic young lawyer, was holding the gun. He pulled the trigger. The gun jammed. Now she says she's going to divorce him.

"That 'Mr. Polly Moran' stuff was fightin' talk, all right," said the actress. "But Marty didn't have to fight with me."

But he did fight with her, the police blotter showed. He also fought with two policemen. One unintentionally made matters worse by using the same title.

Malone was arraigned before Justice Cecil Holland, of Beverly Hills, on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon. He went free on $500 bail and will appear for a preliminary hearing July 29.

What happened, as Polly recalled, was this:

"Marty went out last night to do some campaigning for a judge we're working for. I guess it would be better not to mention him. Wouldn't do him any good in the election.

"About 3 o'clock, he came in. I

Breezes Relieve Arid Midwest; Toll Now 3,848

Cool Air Moves South; Plains Still Scorched; 94 Is High Here.

Moving from the Hudson Bay region, a mass of cool air yesterday routed the heat wave, which has claimed 3,848 lives, on a wide Middle Western and Great Lakes front, but death and despair still dwelt on the parched Western plains.

For Washington the meterologic happenings half across the Nation had little significance. The temperature here rose to a maximum of 94 degrees at 6:15 p. m., tempered only by the comparatively slight humidity of .31.

Today in Washington, the forecaster said last night, will be fair and somewhat cooler.

Out in the continent's "bread basket"—the wheat country from the Iowa-Nebraska border west and north—living and working conditions became tolerable as the cool air, aided by scattered showers, got in its welcome work.

Last night the Associated Press reported the same condition was

Cummings Hits Alleged Inquiry On Hoover Unit

Reported Action by Secret Service Is Ill-Advised, He Declares.

By the United Press.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings yesterday leaped to the defense of J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, when asked to comment on reports that Secret Service agents have been investigating the Justice Department operators.

"There has been some such activity of an ill-advised nature," Cummings said. The reports have been branded by Secret Service heads as "not only untrue, but ridiculous."

The reports had indicated friction between the Bureau of Investigation, headed by Hoover, and the Secret Service, which operates under the Treasury Department.

"I'll say this," Cummings asserted, "if they're shooting at Hoover, they're shooting at the wrong man. They ought to begin shooting at me. Mr. Hoover has my complete confidence and support."

The Attorney General declined to discuss the situation further, referring all other questions about the purported interdepartmental investigation to the Treasury Department. Secret Service Chief William

Wife Seeks Decree From Paul Gallico

Chicago, July 15 (AP).—Paul Gallico, fiction and sports writer, was sued for divorce here today by Elaine St. Johns Gallico, daughter of Adela Rogers St. John, the author.

The bill was filed in the Superior Court and alleged cruelty. It gave Gallico's address as Surrey, England.

The couple was married April 18, 1934, in Great Neck, Long Island, N. Y., and separated, the bill sets forth, on March 8, 1935, in Chicago.

The bill alleged that on that date Gallico slapped his wife and that he had also "slapped and pushed her" without provocation the day before.

Attorney Harold M. Keele, representing the 21-year-old wife, said a property settlement had been effected, but would not reveal the amount. He said Mrs. Gallico was living in a near North Side apartment, but would not disclose her address.

Keele said he would seek an immediate hearing of the suit. The Gallicos have no children.

40,000 Tons of U. S. Destroyers To Be Kept to Match Britain

By the Associated Press.

Admiral William H. Standley, acting Secretary of the Navy, said yesterday that as the result of Great Britain's invocation of the escalator clause in the 1930 naval treaty, the Navy will retain 40,000 tons of destroyers which otherwise would be slated for scrapping.

"We will match the British, as provided in the treaty," Standley said.

Formal notification of the British move came late yesterday from Robert Worth Bingham, Ambassador to London. State Department officials declined comment.

The escalator clause permits any signatory nation to retain ships it considers necessary because of changed conditions or construction of new ships by other nations.

Under the treaty, the destroyer fleets of the British and American navies were limited to 150,000 tons after next December 31. Britain's retention of 40,000 tons of destroyers automatically permits the United States to retain the same tonnage. Japan may retain 28,133 tons.

The United States now has approximately 290,000 tons of destroyers, most of which, however, are ships constructed during World War days and considered over-age and obsolete.

Only ten destroyers now in commission are under age, but 51 more are under construction. Those 61 new ships, together with sufficient others to give the United States 190,000 tons of that type of fighting craft,

A. F. L. Delays Rebels' Trial Again, Adopts Aug. 3 as Date

Arbitration Conferences Are Making Progress, Green Declares.

Steel Drive Gains 3,000, Bittner Says

Mine Workers Journal Assails A. F. L. Council; Frey Files Charges.

By Sidney Olson.

Stalling off once more the day of reckoning, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor last night set August 3 as the date of "trial" for the 12 rebel unions who have cast their lots with John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

William Green, president of the federation, in discussing continued efforts by third parties to bridge the widening gap in labor's ranks, said:

"I hope the trial never has to be held."

Green yesterday was still hopeful that "eventually" some arrangement can be made whereby the dozen insurgent unions can be brought back into the fold, or their attitude softened to the extent that a reconciliation will not seem to repudiate the federation's strong stand against the industrialization committee.

The "trial" will be held in Washington. The procedure is indefinite thus far, Green said last night at the break-up of an all-day session of the executive council, because such procedure has never been conducted by the governing body before.

Outlines Procedure.

However, he expects it to last several days, to be "free of red tape and legal talk," and to consist of informal examination of a representative from each of the insurgent groups by the executive council.

Lewis declined to comment on the trial, or state whether he would appear. "Not a word from me," he said.

Earlier in the day the latest issue of the United Mine Workers Journal, organ of Lewis' organization, had appeared, saying editorially on the subject of the executive council's opposition to the industrial organization drive:

"The executive council of the American Federation of Labor has joined hands with the great steel companies to prevent the organization of the workers in the steel industry.

"Were it not so serious a matter, this childish position would be humorous, for it is on a par with the petulance of a peevish little boy who refuses to play with his playmates unless they play his way."

The federation's chief, William Green, revealed last night that the peace-making efforts of two Government officials, and one of his own executive council members who does not believe in suspending Lewis' group, were at last bearing some fruit.

The officials, Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady, the Labor Department's ace trouble-shooter, and the Rev. Francis J. Haas, formerly of the National Labor Relations Board, are the Government peacemakers. George Harrison, young, aggressive president of the Railway Clerks, is the third. They met with John L. Lewis Tuesday night, Green said he had been informed, and future meetings are indicated.

Charges Agitation.

In reference to these meetings, Green said yesterday he was hopeful the interim between last night and August 3 would effect a reconciliation. He said:

"These conferences strengthen the hopes of the members of the executive council that ultimately a basis of accommodation may be found."

The charges against the C. I. O., on which the unions in that group will be tried, were formally brought yesterday by John P. Frey, president of the federation's metal trades department.

They are:

"1. That the committee for industrial organization is a dual organization functioning within the American Federation of Labor as such, and in administrative activities, it is clearly competing as a rival organization with the A. F. of L. That the final authority in the American Federation of Labor is the executive council and the conventions of the federation, and that the C. I. O. has set itself up as a dual authority, and is now engaged in an effort to determine the ques-

Landon, Knox Talk at Topeka, Map Campaigns

Acceptance Speeches Are Topic; Chicagoan Will Tour Northwest.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., July 15.—Gov. Alf M. Landon and Col. Frank Knox compared notes on their acceptance speeches today and charted an anti-New Deal campaign which gave Knox the Northwest for his first major speaking tour.

Dates and exact itineraries were not fixed. Some observers thought Landon would strike first in the East, possibly with an address at West Middlesex, Pa., his birthplace.

At a desk in Landon's study the nominees discussed the acceptance addresses they will deliver when formally notified of their nominations. Representative Bertrand Snell, of New York, permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention, will notify Landon at Topeka, July 23; Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, temporary chairman and keynoter, will notify Knox at Chicago, July 30.

Knox said the campaign itineraries would be arranged so he and Landon would not be in the same territory at the same time.

To Work on Talks.

"I am returning to Chicago tonight for a couple of days," Knox said. "On Friday I will go to New Hampshire to get in ten days of solid work on my speeches.

"After my notification, my first speech will be at an Indiana Republican meeting at Connersville, August 8. I will address a West Virginia rally at Huntington August 13."

On some date after these speeches Knox said he would make his Northwest trip.

"Do you think your campaign plans will prove effective," Knox was asked.

"I'll say I do," the Vice Presidential candidate replied.

"I expect to get into the Maine campaign sometime before the election September 14," he said, "but no date has been fixed yet."

Another Topeka visitor today was Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, for whom former Senator Henry J. Allen entertained at dinner. Gannett supported Borah in the preconvention campaign.

On Landon's calling list tomorrow is Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, who served as governor of the Federal Reserve Board during Herbert Hoover's Administration.

Breckinridge Praised.

Individually, both Landon and Knox expressed gratification at announcement of Col. Breckinridge, anti-New Deal Democrat who contested President Roosevelt's renomination in several States, that he would "vote" for the Republican ticket.

"We, like others," Landon told newsmen, "is placing loyalty to country above party fealty. His support is certainly welcomed."

"I think Col. Breckinridge is a very considerable element of strength," Knox said. "We welcome him."

As Landon and Knox chatted in the yellow-brick executive mansion, observers recalled a plan once tentatively approved for Landon to open his campaign at West Middlesex.

Such a trip, as outlined by Charles D. Hilles, New York National Committeeman, might embrace stops at Chautauqua, Buffalo or Rochester, N. Y., and a tour of New England.

May Leave West to Knox.

Knox was greeted on his arrival here today by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, and former Senator Henry J. Allen.

Landon picked up his running mate at his hotel and drove him to the executive mansion for luncheon with two aids, Leroy Vernon and Neil Carruthers. Both Landon and Knox were on the guest list of a dinner given by Allen tonight in honor of Gannett.

Talking with reporters, Knox said there was an "absolutely unmistakable swing" to the Republican banner in the Midwest. He expressed delight with Breckinridge's statement and added:

"I think he is an extremely strong, capable man who, like millions of other Democrats, think President Roosevelt's policies are intolerable."

In his statement of support last night, Breckinridge said he thought the election of Landon and Knox "will accomplish lasting good for the country" while the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt "would cause lasting harm."

Son Born at Fort Worth To Elliott Roosevelts

Fort Worth, Tex., July 15 (AP).—A Presidential telegram, dispatched from the schooner Sewanna, topped a mounting list of messages tonight at Cook Memorial Hospital expressing delight over the arrival of Franklin D. Roosevelt's seventh grandchild—a "fine, husky-looking boy."

The 6¾-pound baby was born last night to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt and news of the arrival brought an exclamation of "that's fine" from the President's wife in New York.

Elated that the child was a boy, Elliott Roosevelt, whose first child was a girl, passed the cigars. Hospital attendants declared his wife, the former Ruth Googins, was feeling well.

Draft-Hastings Move Urged by Vandenberg

Wilmington, Del., July 15 (AP).—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, of Michigan, made known today that he would welcome a demand by the voters of Delaware that Senator Daniel O. Hastings be renominated and re-elected in spite of Hastings' decision to retire.

In a letter to Theadore G. Joslyn, president of the Wilmington News-Journal Co., the Michigan Senator expressed "deep regret" over Senator Hastings' decision and said there is a need for "seasoned, experienced men" which "begs" for his return to the Senate.

Decision of Federal Reserve to Increase Deposit Reserve Requirements Is Far-Reaching.

By Franklyn Waltman.

PERHAPS no more far-reaching and significant announcement has come from the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System since the depression started than that of the decision to increase deposit reserve requirements 50 per cent, effective August 15.

WALTMAN.

As the country has learned from past experience, the decisions of the Reserve Board may have their effect years hence on the lives of the lowliest among us. The difficulty lies in recognizing the really crucial decision when it is made.

It is entirely possible that the action just taken by the Reserve System authorities may have a marked effect on American economic and financial affairs years hence—or perhaps the failure to take the step decided on by the board might bring disaster two, three or five years from now. Few thought at the time that the board's easy money policy of 1927 would hasten—as it did—the day of the cataclysm which overcame the country in 1929.

* * *

Without venturing too far afield in speculation, however, there are certain things which definitely can be said about the board's decision to increase deposit reserves. In the first place, such action generally has been advocated for many months in the orthodox financial community. It is regarded as an anti-inflationary move and consequently in the direction of financial stability.

The board has acted to narrow the base of credit expansion and thus has swept into what might be termed an asbestos box some of the inflammable monetary tinder lying about our national household awaiting the match of some future credit boom—a boom, which, due to the daily increasing restoration of confidence in the business outlook, approaches ever closer.

This was done by using one of the levers of credit control—which Congress a year ago placed in the hands of the board to prevent the runaway credit inflation which most students of the subject have feared ever since the passage of the gold stabilization act in January, 1934.

* * *

Congress empowered the board to raise reserve requirements by as much as 100 per cent over the figures specified by law. The board has chosen to exercise one-half of this authority. The mechanics of the operation are as follows:

If you live in New York or Chicago, 13 cents out of every dollar you deposit in your checking account at the present time must be deposited with the Reserve Bank as a reserve against that deposit. The bank is free to lend or invest the remaining 87 cents. Under the new provision the bank must set up 19½ cents as a reserve against your dollar deposit and is free to lend or invest only 80½ cents.

These reserve requirements vary in different cities. In other cities where there is a Reserve bank the present reserve requirement is 10 per cent, which will be raised to 15 per cent. So-called "country banks"—outside of the Reserve Bank cities—are required now to set up only a 7 per cent reserve, which will be raised to 10½ per cent.

The sweeping effect of this action on contracting the credit base is seen when it is considered that the deposit reserve requirements under the new rates will have to be increased $1,450,000,000. In other words that amount of credit—now available—on August 15 will be immobilized or sterilized.

* * *

Where are the banks to get this additional sum which they must set up as reserves? Virtually every bank in the country has more than sufficient idle funds to take care of the increased requirements. If a bank has not sufficient idle funds it will have one month in which to borrow the needed funds from its Reserve Bank until it can bring its loan and investment portfolio into line—or it may get the money direct by letting loans or investments drain off immediately.

Banks without sufficient funds to take care of the increased requirements, however, are isolated cases. The commercial banks, as a whole, at this time have idle funds of $3,000,000,000 and it is estimated that by August 15 the sum will reach $3,500,000,000. These idle funds are kept on deposit with the Reserve banks and are known as "excess reserves"—that is, reserves over and above the legal requirements.

The increase in reserve requirements was designed to decrease this excess reserve total, which in the event of a runaway credit boom could support as much as $30,000,000,000 of additional credit. It is figured that after providing for the increased reserve requirements, the banks of the country will have $1,900,000,000 of idle money, or excess reserves—and that is an unduly large figure. It could produce a credit inflation of dangerous proportions.

But the Reserve system authorities are now prepared to deal with that figure should the occasion arise. The 12 Reserve banks own $2,430,000,000 of Government bonds. These they could sell in moderate amounts weekly or relinquish them as they mature, thus bringing about a further contraction of the credit base. Indeed, August 15 will mark the first time in more than a year in which the Reserve authorities have been in a position to control excess reserves through an open market operation, that is, the selling of Government securities.

* * *

Although normally a tightening of the money market through such action as that just announced should create a tendency toward high interest rates, some authorities doubt that will happen. They believe that the action will contribute to confidence and thus encourage investors, who have idle funds but have been nervous about inflation, to place their money in long-term bonds, including Government securities. The reaction of the Government bond market following the board's announcement does not confirm this theory—but the market performance on one day no more indicates the tendency than one swallow makes a summer.

England Abandons Policy on Dardanelles

Montreux, Switzerland, July 15 (AP).—Great Britain in a compromise settlement of the Dardanelles dispute, agreed today to abandon her broad doctrine of keeping the straits open in wartime. With most other Dardanelles pact signatories, the British acceded to a Russian demand that the straits be closed to belligerent warships when Turkey is neutral.

This strict lockout would be relaxed only when a belligerent nation sent warships through the straits under the obligations of the League of Nations Covenant, or under a League-sanctioned treaty to which Turkey was a party.

Delegations of Rumania, Yugoslavia and Japan referred the new convention text to their governments, with recommendations it be accepted. Bulgaria, however, made reservations.

Bon Voyage Fete Spoiled.

New York, July 15 (AP).—The knell of the traditional bon voyage party aboard ship was sounded today, customs men said, by a Federal order requiring the sealing of all liquor stores on ships while in port. For some time, ships desiring to have their bars open while in port have had to obtain licenses from the city.

Bermuda-to-New York Air Service Is Planned

London, July 15 (AP).—An authoritative source said today the inauguration of a weekly air service between Bermuda and New York is expected this autumn.

The service, as contemplated, will be operated by Imperial Airways, the British International Airline, subsidized with capital and annual contributions. The annual maximum subsidy will be £18,000 ($90,000), of which the Bermuda government will contribute £3,300 ($16,500) for five years, the colonial office to pay the difference.

The projected service, involving a flight of 700 miles across the Atlantic, has been visualized as the first leg of a regular transatlantic service between the United States and Europe.

Rumania Gets Loan.

Bucharest, July 15 (AP).—Reports in the Rumanian press today said Czechoslovakia had granted credits to Rumania, including 200,000,000 krone at 5 per cent interest for armament orders and a 90,000,000 krone loan at 2 per cent for building a strategic railroad as the shortest connection between Czechoslovakia and Rumania.

1936 Convention Held Most Reactionary in History of Republicans.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and for many years a prominent figure at Republican national conventions, tonight said the 1936 convention had recorded itself as "the most reactionary in the party's entire history."

In a statement issued on his return from Europe, where he spent four weeks in the interests of the Carnegie endowment for international peace, Dr. Butler said:

"The doctrines set out and defended in the Cleveland platform are economic nationalism of the narrowest and most dangerous sort."

"Those paragraphs which deal with tariff and with foreign affairs are, no doubt, satisfactory to a Hearst, a Democrat who has fought the Republican Party, its candidates and its principles with ferocity for 40 years, or to a Borah, who, from his place in the Senate, has led a small minority which has prevented the Republican Party from executing its repeated pledge to the people to join other civilized nations in substituting judicial process for military force in the settlement of international differences and disputes.

"These paragraphs cannot possibly satisfy any life-long Republican devoted to his party's ruling principles and ideals as expounded by the greatest of its leaders for a generation past. These paragraphs, in effect, denounce and renounce the leadership and the teachings of Garfield, of Blaine and of McKinley, in all that relates to lowering tariff barriers for the purpose of finding world-wide and growing markets for the products of our agriculture and our industry and permitting foreign debts to us to be paid, of reducing unemployment to a minimum, of raising the general standard of living and of laying a solid economic foundation for peace throughout the world."

Taxpayers Warned Deadline Is Near

"There should be at least 43,000 personal tax returns filed before August 1," he said. "Up to the present time there have been but 8,000 returns declaring taxable personal property and about 4,000 returns declaring no taxable personal property. Consequently there are about 37,000 persons who own taxable personal property yet to complete this obligation.

"No excuse can be taken for delinquency in filing personal tax returns looking toward having the penalty removed, and those persons who have not filed returns before August 1 will be compelled to pay an additional 20 per cent penalty provided by law."

The personal tax office is open on week days from 8:30 a. m. to 4:45 p. m., and on Saturdays from 8:30 a. m. to 12:45 p. m.

Alfonso's Son Fined.

New York, July 15 (U.P.).—Alfonso Borbon paid a $2 traffic fine by proxy today. The proxy, J. R. Dender, explained his principal was ill at his hotel and could not appear. Borbon, he explained further, is the name used in business by Alfonso de Bourbon, Count of Covadonga, Prince of the Asturias and former heir to the throne of Spain.

U.S. Employes Get Pay Checks After Few Hours' Delay

All but a relatively few Government employes here received their pay yesterday, though for a few hours it appeared all would be disappointed.

Accustomed to receiving their semi-monthly salaries in the morning, the clerks were chagrined to learn their money was being held up because new budgetary symbols were being introduced. Each departmental and bureau salary appropriation, it was explained, has a budgetary symbol and these are changed every fiscal year.

Yesterday was the first pay day of the new fiscal year and due to the symbol reallocations, there was some delay in liberating the huge pay roll. Last of the agencies to be served were the Shipping Board and Bureau of Mines, whose funds were released late in the afternoon.

Mrs. Rohde Meets First Lady in N. Y.

New York, July 15 (AP).—Back from a wedding trip to Niagara Falls, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen and her Danish husband, Capt. Boerge Rohde, joined Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today in a conference at Democratic national headquarters.

America's woman Minister to Denmark, who was married to Capt. Rohde in the presence of President and Mrs. Roosevelt at Hyde Park on Saturday, came here presumably to discuss her part in the Presidential campaign.

She said last week she would take an active part in the campaign in behalf of the President.

With Mrs. Roosevelt at Democratic headquarters was Miss Mary Dewson, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee and head of the women's campaign division.

Mrs. Rohde said she and her husband would leave New York later this week for a vacation in the West. They expect to spend some time at Yellowstone National Park.

Boy Rests in Park, Fears to Go Home

The day was warm and George Eversfield, 9, of 1740 Upshur street, was tired of walking. He stretched out on a grassy plot in the 4700 block of Sixteenth street northwest and went to sleep.

A few hours later Sergt. Ralph Cox of the Sixth Precinct happened by and awakened George with the idea of taking him home. George wasn't so sure about his family's pleasure if he returned accompanied by the police. So he wouldn't give his address at first.

After much questioning he was sent to the Receiving Home as unidentified. There he still refused to reveal his identity. His father, C. W. Eversfield, called police when George failed to appear for dinner and the son finally was located.

Finland's Payments Help Jobless Native

New York, July 15 (AP).—Magistrate James Blanchfield seized a chance to make a good will gesture toward Finland today.

Before him was Karl Kojander, born 57 years ago in Finland, charged with vagrancy.

"We can help people from countries that didn't pay their war debts," the magistrate said.

"We certainly aren't going to permit a Finn to starve when Finland was the one country that has paid so honorably on the dot."

Reserve Boost 'Experimental,' Norman States

English Bank Expert, Here, Says U. S. Step 'Must Be Very Good Thing.'

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, arrived today for one of his occasional visits to this country and broke his usual silence to comment on the action of the Federal Reserve Board in raising reserve requirements for member banks as a "very good thing."

The veteran head of England's central bank said this country had "too much money." From this some banking experts inferred he had reference to the great expansion in demand deposits of the Nation's banks since 1933 and the potentialities for further expansion in the surplus of loanable funds, technically known as excess reserves.

"Raising the reserve requirements must be a good thing or the Federal Reserve Board would not have done it," he was quoted as saying. He suggested, however, that the action "was highly experimental."

Gov. Norman's trip was described as a vacation visit. But is was recalled that on his past visits he often has taken time to confer with American financial authorities.

Asked if he expected stabilization in Great Britain to lead to the return of any considerable amount of gold to Europe, he replied, "I hope not."

"You can keep it," he added, smilingly, "we do not want it. We had enough trouble taking it from the ground."

He said he had no opinion regarding prospects for world stabilization of currency.

Gov. Norman said he would stay in New York for about two days and then go to Maine. He expects to return to England in about 10 days.

McBride to Quit Post as Leader Of Dry League

Will Resign as National Head to Direct Drive in Pennsylvania.

Dr. F. Scott McBride, who for the past 12½ years has been general superintendent of the Antisaloon League of America with headquarters here, last night announced that he will resign to become State superintendent of the Antisaloon League of Pennsylvania.

The dry leader said that his resignation, which will become effective not later than October 1, will be presented at the semiannual meeting of the executive committee of the national organization at Cincinnati today.

Dr. McBride gave the following reasons for taking the Pennsylvania position:

"The battle lines in the war against the liquor evil have shifted back to the States and Pennsylvania presents one of the most challenging opportunities for temperance activities.

"My services as general superintendent are not now required at Washington and in the various States in connection with pending or immediately prospective national dry legislation.

"With the decided upturn in dry sentiment under repeal conditions, and with the successful readjustment of State league activities to meet the new situation there are now no critical State league problems requiring my personal attention as general superintendent.

"Readjustments which I am recommending in the relationships between the State leagues and the national organization make this the most practicable time for a change to be made, and will at the same time enable them to be helpful both to the national work and in connection with State problems."

Dr. McBride, who was an important figure in the forces which fought for the eighteenth amendment, succeeds the late Dr. Homer W. Tope as Pennsylvania State superintendent.

Dr. McBride said:

"While I enjoyed my work in the national field, I am looking forward with great pleasure to the more intensive and intimate fighting in the State field which always has appealed to me. Furthermore, national prohibition will return by way of the States."

2 Hamm Kidnaping Aids Will Testify

St. Paul, July 15 (AP).—Two confessed participants in the $100,000 William Hamm kidnaping will be Government witnesses against John P. (Jack) Pifer, lone remaining defendant, George F. Sullivan, United States district attorney, announced today.

One will be Edmund C. Bartholomey, former Bensenville, Ill., postmaster who pleaded guilty as a kidnap conspirator today. The other will be Byron Bolton, who pleaded guilty earlier.

Guilty pleas also have been entered by Alvin Karpis, one-time public enemy No. 1, who reversed his former plea of innocent as the trial opened yesterday, and Charles (Big Fitz) Fitzgerald.

Hamm told of his abduction and of being held four days by the kidnapers during ransom negotiations.

His testimony followed Sullivan's opening remarks to the jury, in which the district attorney declared Peifer received $10,000 for his share in the abduction, and an additional $30,000 "to be spread around for certain other purposes," details of which Sullivan said he would reveal later in the trial.

are expected to be retained under the Navy's present plans.

Limited to 150,000 Tons.

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., July 15 (AP).—Rear Admiral Richmond P. Hobson, retired, who sank the famous gunboat Merrimac in Santiago Harbor, Cuba, announced today the organization of a Nation-wide movement which he said was intended to defend constitutional democracy against all assailants.

The movement, Hobson said, was taking the form of a "clearing house" intended to group together many citizens and organizations in support of "national defense and Americanism" against communist autocracy.

He spoke before the New York State convention of United Spanish War Veterans.

Between 300 and 400 national organizations have been notified of the movement, he said, and he urged Spanish War Veterans today to initiate the organization of veterans.

Names Two Groups.

Sponsoring the movement, he said, are the national defense committee of the Military Naval Club and a young organization incorporated as the Public Welfare Association, Inc., both of New York City.

Hobson is chairman of the board of each organizations. He said the younger organization had been incorporated within the last six months and that its directors were: Col. Frederick H. Allen, Gen. John J. Byrne, Senator Royal S. Copeland, Representative Hamilton Fish, Col. C. Sidney Haight, Maj. L. Gordon Hamersley, Maj. Gen. John F. O'Ryan, Dr. Arthur LaRoe, Admiral John K. Robinson and Maj. J. G. Phelps Stokes.

Powder Blast Kills 2.

The dead were identified as Ralph Higgins, 30, and Corwin Prentiss, 38. Missing was August Began, 37, and searchers dug into the ruins to learn whether he had been killed.

Girl Fails to Identify Pair

jury and was taken back to the office of Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, detective chief, for further grilling. A few minutes later, Inspector Thompson emerged from his office to announce:

"There will be a complete expose before noon tomorrow of Margaret Bell's story of mutilation by gangsters."

The detective chief refused to amplify his statement, explaining that "anything could happen" to upset present plans.

Agree to Face Her.

Marmone and Silver, brought here from New York yesterday on warrants charging assault with intent to kill, readily agreed to face their accuser. They were separated in the line of prisoners and stood beneath the brilliant lights. The Bell woman sat in the front of seats directly in front of the platform. The room was full of newsmen and detectives.

Capt. Keck asked each man his name, address and previous criminal record. When routine questioning was finished, and the prisoners were paraded back and forth in front of witnesses, Capt. Keck turned and demanded:

Fumbles With Her Hands.

No one moved. The Bell girl dropped her head and fumbled with her hands. Then the suspects were taken out. Inspector Thompson approached the woman and asked:

"Can you identify any of those men as either the one you saw at the Hanger Club or the one who came to your apartment and allegedly attacked you?"

The girl shook her head and said: "No."

"Are you sure?" she was asked.

Silver wore the sweater she described.

"In what way does he resemble th man?" Ispector Thompson asked.

"His profile and size," she responded.

"Are you positive enough for us to charge him with the alleged crime," was the next question.

"I don't want him charged," the Bell woman said.

At this point, Capt. Keck interjected:

"We are not asking what you want—the question is are you positive of your identification?"

Not Willing to Swear.

The girl hesitated.

"Are you willing to take an oath and swear before the grand jury that this man is connected with your reputed assault?" asked Keck.

"No," said the girl.

Then she said she could not identify anyone in the line-up. Repeatedly, detectives asked her to be sure of herself. And she continued to insist that beyond the "resemblance," she could not pick out the men she accuserd.

As the accused men reached Washington last night, investigators announced they also were seeking a colored man here, believed to have seen the young woman a short time before she was found allegedly semiconscious in her gas-filled apartment at 1230 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

The police said they wanted to check the man's story in an effort to confront the woman with testimony of conflicting time elements.

While Washington and New York investigators marked time, awaiting the arrival of the accused "killers," a Washington war veteran identified the Bell girl as one who robbed him of $700 in a Baltimore hotel June 29.

Recognizing her picture in the newspapers, Philip R. Davis, 38, of Mount Alto Hospital, went to the Police Women's Bureau and pointed her out in a line of women prisoners. Davis told Inspector Thompson he met the girl in Washington and they went to Baltimore on a drinking party. He said she took two wallets containing his bonus money.

A warrant accusing the woman of grand larceny was issued in Baltimore yesterday and reached Washington last night.

Police Here 'Fed Up.'

It was indicated last night that Capital investigators were literally "fed up" with the entire affair. New York authorities, however, insist on "cracking" the girl's story. Manhattan's special racket prosecutor—Thomas Dewey—is understood to have instructed his agents—Paul Lockwood and Frank S. Hogan—now in Washington, to "blow the lid off" her fantastic branding tale.

The Bell woman was a witness before the New York grand jury which investigated Luciano's vice activities, and during the subsequent trial authorities issued a warning that he would be forced to serve the maximum of a 30-to-50 year sentence if harm befell any witness. However, the Bell woman's testimony was not used at the trial.

When the girl told of being attacked and branded with the initials "C. L." and the figures "3-12," Dewey was frankly skeptical. When Washington police were convinced the story was a hoax and were ready to order the girl to leave town, he immediately sent his agents with orders to obtain a signed confession.

Malmone and Silver, according to the woman's story, were the ones sent here to "get her" for testifying against Luciano.

Fredericksburg Milk Tests Low in Baltimore

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., July 15.—Figures based on monthly tests made by the State show that Fredericksburg has one of the best milk supplies in Virginia, according to Sanitary Inspector R. E. Beckham.

The average bacteria count in the milk dispensed by six licensed dealers in a recent month was only 9,000. Milk classified as Grade A has a bacteria count of less than 100,000; grade B between 100,000 and 200,000 and grade V over 200,000. Only in rare instances has milk sold by dairymen here fallen into the latter category. The average of 9,000 was described as excellent.

Lehman Receives Report as Mrs. Creighton's Death Nears.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 15.—A commission of four physicians and an attorney reported to Gov. Lehman tonight that an examination of Mrs. Mary Frances Creighton, convicted poison-murderer, shows no evidence of organic disease and reveals "her disturbances in motor power, in sensation and in speech are in part hysterical."

The report came 31 hours before the woman is scheduled to die in Sing Sing Prison with Everett R. Appelgate for the poison-murder of the latter's wife, Ada.

"We find no evidence of organic disease of the central nervous system or of the body as a whole," the commission reported. "If she has lost weight, it is not apparent.

"Her disturbances in motor power, in sensation, and in speech are in part hysterical. They are grossly exaggerated by conscious malingering. Her mind appears to be clear and she fully appreciates her present situation."

The Governor did not comment on the report, leaving in doubt whether he would consider a possible commutation of sentence or allow Mrs. Creighton to die as scheduled. No mention was made of Appelgate.

Virginia Crops Cut By U. S. Program

Richmond, Va., July 15 (AP).—John R. Hutcheson, director of the Agricultural Extension Division of the State Department of Agriculture, said today that the Federal program of soil conservation reduced the acreage of soil-depleting crops in Virginia by at least 10 per cent.

Sixty thousand farmers in the State are co-operating in the program, which was put into effect in the middle of the planting season, he said.

The soil-depleting crops include tobacco, cotton and grain. The extension director said that while the program was not entirely effective in its present form, it was accomplishing the dual purpose of stopping overproduction of these crops and increasing the production of soil-building crops.

The drought, particularly damaging in the southwestern part of the State, resulted in midseason expansion of the conservation activities, he said.

was just getting in bed. I saw something was the matter, so I smiled and said pleasantly, 'What's eating you, Marty; you look awful.'

"'I'll show you what's eating me,' he says, and he went over and got the gun out of the drawer. 'I'm going to blow your brains out and mine, too,' he says. 'And you know why?'

"'Put down that gun, Marty,' I said. 'I don't know what you're talking about.'

"'Somebody just called me Mr. Polly Moran,' he says. 'What do you think of that?'

Jammed Gun Against Her.

"I told him to drop the gun because I couldn't think of anything at all while he was waving it around, but he wouldn't do it. He threw one leg over me to make me hold still—Marty's an athlete, you know; he used to fight in the ring when he was in college—and then he jammed that gun against me.

"I looked down the barrel and saw a bullet sittin' there, and I closed my eyes and began to scream bloody murder."

Polly said she remembered a movie scene, so she kicked the telephone off the hook and punctuated her screams with the address of their home.

"I guess an angel must have had her arms around me," she continued, "because I heard the click-click-click of the gun, but it didn't go off.

Heard Wail of Siren.

She said Malone dropped the gun when it failed to fire. Then they heard the wail of a police radiocar's siren. The actress looked out of the bedroom window.

"Gosh, I never saw so much flannel underwear in my life walking up and down the sidewalk. All the neighbors were out.

"Then the police car came, and Marty grabbed my arm."

He told her not to open the door, she said.

"But I said, 'maybe it isn't the police, Marty. Maybe it's just somebody that saw the lights up here and thought they would come up.'"

Drinking, They Report.

They said Malone met them at the head of the stairs and declined to accompany them to the station. In their report, they noted he had been drinking.

One of the deputies said:

"Are you Mr. Polly Moran?"

Malone struck out with his fists, the officers said. One was hit in the chest with such force that his enameled pencil broke and a jagged piece stuck him.

Came the dawn. Malone, bewhiskered and disheveled, paced rapidly up and down the cell of the Beverly Hills Jail. Later, his lawyers came. He refused to make any statement—even when told that Miss Moran vowed she would divorce him immediately—except to say:

"They called me Mr. Polly Moran."

Who's a Sissy? Not These Boy Sewing Students!

Aztec Herb Book Of 16th Century To Be Published

The first medical book written in America is to be published by the Smithsonian Institution.

The book was written nearly 400 years ago in the Aztec language by an Aztec Indian, Martin de la Cruz, who was studying in the Mexican College of Santa Cruz. It was translated into Latin by Juannes Badianus, another Aztec, also studying at the college.

Just five years ago the manuscript was discovered in the Vatican Library at Rome by Dr. Charles U. Clark, an American.

The original title of the manuscript was "A Book on Indian medical herbs, composed by a certain Indian physician of the College of Santa Cruz, who is not theoretically learned, but is taught only by experience. In the year of our Savior 1532."

The manuscript contains many paintings in colors of various medical plants, all of which will be reproduced in the "first edition."

The book contains remedies for many forms of illness, including falling hair, cold, sore eyes, fever, skull fractures and cataracts.

Lads Ignore Jibes of 'the Gang,' Join Girls for Sewing Classes

The other boys may rib them all they want to, but Frank Hester, Newell Johnson, Arnold McKee and Billy Warmack are going to keep right on with their sewing.

Every afternoon they join a group of girls in a room at Ben Murch School, Thirty-fifth and Davenport streets, and spend a couple of hours doing fancy buttonhole stitches or running up fine seams. The daily sewing circle is part of the program of the Ben Murch Playground.

"Naw, the other boys don't kid me," he said yesterday.

"Yes, they do, too," said little Muriel Warmack.

"Well, what do I care; it doesn't worry me any," he boasted as he took a dainty stitch in a printed dimity apron he is making for his mother. Proudly he exhibited the other articles he has made in the last few weeks; a guest towel and a pillow with some embroidery on its top.

Newell Johnson, 9, Arnold McKee, 10, and Billy Warmark, 11, said they "guessed they took up sewing because Frank did."

But the playground director, Frances DeLacy, said it probably was because she had no assistant to look after boys' activities this year.

"So many girls want to sew I had to have a sewing class and that left nothing for the boys during two hours, so they finally decided to join us," Miss DeLacy explained.

"Yeah, that's why I started," put in Frank as he turned a corner on the dimity apron. "I had nothing else to do and this isn't bad after you get used to it."

Arnold, who sewed last summer, has a gingham pillow and a stuffed pig of oilcloth to his credit. Newell and Billy made their debut with needle and thread only a few weeks ago. The former has turned out a blue checked marble bag and Billy has made a stuffed duck of blue oilcloth.

"They work harder and steadier than the girls," said Miss DeLacy.

Snake Escapes In Coast Court, Causes a Panic

Reptile Witness Captured, Returned to Cage in Murder Trial.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, July 15.—The courtroom where Robert S. James is being tried for the death of his seventh wife, Mary, was thrown into a panic today when one of the rattlesnakes he is accused of using to torture her escaped and slithered over the floor.

The snake, named Lethal, rattled and glided out of the box. The courtroom held about 100 spectators.

Lethal's freedom ended in five minutes. He went into hiding and a frantic search was conducted.

Finally the herpetrologist examining the snake when it escaped, A. Tierce Artran, found the fugitive. It was hiding under a book case.

Aided by "Snake Joe" Houtenbrink, reptile dealer from whom the pair of snakes was purchased, according to the State, Artran put Lethal back into the box. He used a long stick with a wire fork attached to it.

Terrorists' Victim Asks Inquiry End

Conway, S. C., July 15 (AP).—The plea of an apprehensive victim of nightriding Carolina terrorists for abandonment of an investigation tonight failed to halt a two-State drive to rip the mask of secrecy from the hooded floggers.

Monroe Fowler, 40-year-old tobacco farmer whose flogging made the terrorism an interstate affair, tonight appealed to State and county officers to abandon their investigation.

"I guess I got what I deserved," he told Sheriff W. Edward Sessions.

But Sessions, believing Fowler may be fearful of reprisals from the men who laid 30 cuts from a lash across his bare back, said the inquiry would continue. He was aided by State constables in his effort to identify the nightriding band which has enforced its own primitive moral code in both Carolinas with the whiplash and intimidation.

New Fight Lost By U. S. to Put 12 Back in Jobs

Court Denies Rehearing in Row With Pittsburgh Steel Firm.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, July 15.—The National Labor Relations Board's application for a rehearing of its petition to compel the Jones-Laughlin Steel Co. of Pittsburgh to reinstate 12 discharged employes was denied today by the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The motion for rehearing was denied orally. The court did not set forth its reasons.

The board's action to force the steel company to re-employ the 12 men discharged from its Aliquippa (Pa.), plant was denied by the court June 15 in an opinion declaring the "Constitution does not vest in the Federal Government the power to regulate the relation as such of employer and employe in production or manufacture."

The steel company contended the men were dismissed for "inefficiency and violation of company rules." The board complained that the discharges were the result of the men's "union activities in behalf of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America."

The board ordered the men reinstated with back pay April 9, but the company refused and attacked the contitutionality of the act under which the Labor Relations Board was set up.

Board counsel contended the act gave employes redress in collective bargaining and that it was in regulation of interstate commerce.

Cummings Defends Hoover

H. Moran emphatically denied his agents were involved in any such investigation.

Unconfirmed rumors have been circulating about the Capital for months involving purported dissension between the Secret Service and Postoffice inspectors on the one side and the F. B. I. agents on the other.

They grew out of attacks on Hoover in Congress, in which Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, played a prominent part. McKellar was bitterly critical of what he termed indiscriminate shooting of fugitives by the Federal agents. The Secret Service investigation rumors have involved reports that all instances of gunplay by the Investigation Bureau agents were being checked.

McKellar also criticized expenditures of the Hoover men and attempted to cut their appropriation for the current fiscal year.

Postoffice inspectors—a third separate "detective agency" of the Government—have been reported resentful of Hoover's statement that they failed to co-operate in capture this spring of Alvin Karpis, Harry Campbell and other "public enemies."

Congressional action looking toward combination, in the interests of economy, of Government departments whose duties overlap, stimulated the rumors of dissension. Senator Harry F. Byrd now is conducting a committee investigation into the possibility of simplifying Government actvities, including a suggestion for concentrating all the Federal investigating agencies under one head.

$337,281 Estate Left by Willson To Widow, Kin

Several Bequests Made to Friends; Remainder to Form Trust Fund.

Mrs. Mildred M. Willson, widow of the late Henry B. Willson, patent attorney, was named as the principal beneficiary of his $337,281 estate, it was shown yesterday when the Washington Loan & Trust Co. filed a petition for the probate of his will.

Mr. Willson directed that his widow should be given $50,000 and that his sister, Helen V. Hoge, be given $25,000. A former law associate, J. Andrew Griesbauer, was given the patent business and a share in the Willson Building, 711 Eighth street northwest.

Dr. Sterling V. Meade, of the dental operative firm of Meade, Newton & Lynch, was given $10,000, as was Dr. Charles Basseches and his wife, and $1,000 was given Dr. Fenton Bradford, another dental surgeon.

After these bequests are paid, the remainder of the estate is to be held in trust for the wife and sister, the income to go to them for life. Upon their deaths, the Mystic Shrine of North America, in charge of the home for crippled children in Philadelphia, and the Community Chest of Washington, are to share in the estate. Attorneys Peter & Baden represented the estate.

People's Counsel William A. Roberts said he would attend the mass meeting as an "unofficial observer."

Janitor of Bank Held in Robbery

Richmond, Va., July 15 (AP).—Sheriff J. A. Tune and Deputy Sheriff J. R. Noland, of Halifax County, said here tonight that Jeter Henderson, janitor of the Citizens Bank at South Boston, had been detained for questioning in connection with the robbery of the bank of $1,200 on July 7.

The officers brought Joseph S. Williams, who was arrested on a Buckroe Beach dance floor last night on a charge of robbing the bank here, and placed him under guard at the second police station.

Sheriff Tune said Henderson, who is being held in South Boston jail, opened the bank on the morning of the robbery when three bank employes were locked in a vault by a lone bandit who covered them with a gun as they entered shortly after 8 a. m.

Williams, a former convict, was brought here handcuffed and guarded by Detective Sergts. John M. Wright and W. J. Anthony, of the Richmond detective force; Sheriff Tune, Deputy Sheriff Noland and an unnamed agent of the Department of Justice.

Hail and Lightning Darken Richmond

Richmond, Va., July 15 (U.P.).—Hospitals and theaters were thrown into darkness tonight when a terrific electric storm struck the city, pelting its streets with hail stones large as pigeon eggs.

The city was in darkness for three-quarters of an hour before a failure at the power plant was remedied. In that interval, theaters closed down and hospitals resorted to temporary lighting equipment for their operating rooms.

Il Duce Drafts Plan to Assure Europe's Peace

Project Revealed as Rome Marks End of League Sanctions.

By the United Press.

Rome, July 15.—Premier Benito Mussolini today celebrated the end of the world economic siege against Italy by devising a new peace plan for Europe.

After frenzied throngs joyously celebrating the end of League of Nations sanctions heard Il Duce berate sanctionist nations, it was revealed he hopes to keep Europe from separating into two camps.

If the international situation permits, Mussolini will retire Monday to his castle at Rocca Della Caminate to polish up a project designed to bring an atmosphere of peace rather than tension threatening war to the continent.

The project will furnish a formula for consultation among Great Britain, Germany, Italy and France. It would be a modification of Il Duce's old proposals for a four-power pact and would relieve international apprehension resulting from the Austro-German accord and indications of an Italo-German reapproachment.

Based on League.

In attempting now to seize leadership on the European diplomatic scene, the United Press was informed, Mussolini has devised a plan going back to the old idea of a hierarchy of great European powers within the framework of the League.

The plan would require Germany to return to the League, but, it was understood, Soviet Russia would not be included among the great powers of Europe.

It was known that Il Duce recently asked his advisers for a number of exhaustive reports on various European problems.

Il Duce sounded anything but peaceful in his speech to celebrating Romans.

"Today, July 15 of the fourteenth year of the Fascist era, the white flag has been hoisted on the bastions of world sanctionists," Il Duce thundered to cheering crowds milling under his balcony in the Piazza Venezia.

At least 100,000 men, women and children cheered Il Duce wildly as he stepped to the balcony. He wore a double-breasted white suit.

"Italy has won on two fronts—Africa and Europe," he shouted to the throng.

"Sanctionist nations not only have surrendered but they have indicated their intention of returning to good, common sense," Mussolini said. "The merit for this great victory along the economic front belongs to the Italian people."

At this the crowd shouted: "No, no, only to you, O, Duce." But Il Duce replied:

"This victory belongs to the women and children. No one trembled. No one surrendered. All were ready for any sacrifice, certain in their hearts that at the end civilization and justice would triumph in Africa and Europe. This is what happened under the invincible symbol of Littor. So will this happen again tomorrow and always."

Graziani Death Denied.

Sensational reports from Djibouti, French Somaliland, describing Ethiopian attacks on Addis Ababa and Harrar and repeating rumors that Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, viceroy of Ethiopia, had been killed or wounded were denied officially.

At the end of the 241 days' economic siege a British trade mission arrived in Rome and made its first official contact with a special commission instituted by the ministry of corporations. Although Britain led the move for sanctions, the mission sought to resume Anglo-Italian trade relations.

Italy failed to provoke goods shipments across the Franco-Italian frontier on the day sanctions ended because France suspended the Italian import quotas pending signature of a new clearing agreement between the two countries.

The French ministry of commerce warned exporters against rushing goods to Italy unless they were assured of payment in France, since no transfer guarantees exist.

Mrs. Albee Buys Lillian Russell Gem

New York, July 15 (AP).—The late Lillian Russell's "flawless emerald," which has been valued as high at $75,000, was sold at auction for $4,950 today to an attorney acting for Mrs. Edward F. Albee, widow of the vaudeville magnate.

The attorney, Edwin G. Lauder, jr., said Mrs. Albee instructed him to purchase the ring "for sentimental reasons." She was a close friend of the noted stage beauty, who died in 1922, Lauder added.

The emerald, mounted on a gold band and surrounded by a cluster of nine diamonds, was sold at the direction of Edgar M. Lepard, receiver of the property of Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit, daughter of the actress.

The ring was presented to Miss Russell at the height of her career by a wealthy admirer. Following her death, her husband, the late Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh, gave it to Dorothy Caruso Ingraham, widow of the Italian tenor, to seal a betrothal.

The engagement was broken and Mrs. Calvit sued to recover the ring, contending her mother had given it to her in 1919. After several years of litigation an amicable settlement was reached and Mrs. Calvit obtained the ring in 1934.

It was ordered sold to satisfy Mrs. Calvit's creditors.

Just Rambling Along With the Rambling Theater

Children Give First in Series Of Tour Shows

200 See Performance of the Rambling Theater Playground Troupe.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

Before an audience of 200, seated mostly on the ground, a troupe of girl performers from Georgetown, Montrose and Hoover playgrounds, yesterday afternoon presented a vaudeville performance in Montrose Park, Thirtieth and R streets northwest.

The show was the first of a series of weekly rambling theater programs, sponsored by the Community Center Department and the National Capital Parks Office and conducted by the Municipal Playground Department.

Shortly before the time set to remove the folding screens from the big truck which serves as a stage, another act, "Wheatley Hill Billies," was added to the five-act program originally scheduled.

Dressed in rustic garb, the "Hill Billie" sextet played and sang a song describing the delights of mountain music. Their instruments were a sprinkling can, a washboard, a funnel, a comb, and a kazoo. Those in the group were Frank Taylor, Doris Stern, Edward Holcamp, Charlotte Mahoney, Laura St. Clair and Margaret Shea.

The audience, composed of as many elderly persons as children, applauded the entire program with spirit. Mothers smiled over the heads of babies, asleep in their arms. Youngsters in scanty sunsuits sat quietly in the shade of tall trees and followed every move and word of the performers.

The Tumbling Clowns, seven girls dressed in black and white clown suits, formed the biggest attraction so far as the children were concerned.

The tumblers themselves grunted and sighed as they built pyramids and other difficult formations. Sometimes they wobbled perilously but always, after thrilling moments of suspense, they regained their balance.

The clowns were Mildred Hardesty, Peggy Wilson, Eileen Lennon, Frankie Miller, Marjorie Butler, Mary Walling and Anna Leigus, with the last named doing the strong-arm work.

With Dorothy Jett playing the accompaniment on a small organ, Dorothy McCarthy and Virginia Bradford gave a couple of tap dances. Lorraine Howard, her blonde curls bobbing in the sun, also danced.

Dorothy Hawes, dressed in a checked gingham outfit, sang "Down at Uncle Bill's" as she went through a tap dance routine. Her sister, Martha, sang and danced, too. Both girls acted as mistresses of ceremonies.

The other act on the 45-minute program was the "Girls in Blue," a group of youngsters dressed in long skirts and old-fashioned bonnets. They were Betty Kees, Catherine Kees, Lavina Skinner, Margaret Helwig, Anna Tomlinson, Rilla Hall and Faith Elliott. Their bit consisted of singing and dancing.

As soon as the performance was over the rambling theater was hauled away from Montrose Playground. The performers walked but before they left they said they'd probably had a better time than the audience.

Infant's Bones Just Fish.

Topsfield, Mass., July 15 (U.P.).—An alarmed resident telephoned the State police today that workers had unearthed a canvas bag containing an infant's bones. Police sped to the scene only to find fish bones in the bag.

Police Comb Area For 2 in Slaying

Waterford, Conn., July 15 (U.P.).—Scores of State and New London police beat through a thickly wooded area here tonight for two men suspected of a gasoline station robbery during which 18-year-old Falix Perkins was slain on his birthday.

State Police Sergeant Arthur W. Whitmarsh said one of the men has been identified as Lawrence McCracken, a man "with a police record a mile long."

Perkins was found dead in front of the gas station on the Boston post road here early yesterday. A bullet had ripped into his chest, passed through his body and lodged in his thigh.

The robbers' loot was $26.34.

The two suspects approached an aged resident of the town this afternoon and demanded water, then fled into the woods.

The old man, whose name was not immediately available, identified a picture of McCracken as that of one of the pair who accosted him, the officer said.

Paris, Brussels Call on London For Arms Pact

Locarno Parley Excluding Germany and Italy Is Objective.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, July 15.—France and Belgium joined efforts tonight to induce Great Britain to attend a three-power Locarno conference and consummate virtual military alliances without Germany or Italy.

Both powers were agreed, authorized sources said, that Great Britain must be called upon to fulfill the terms of the Locarno accord on March 19 now that conciliation with Germany has "broken down."

French and Belgian officials said they desired to have quick talks with Germany, but the British wished to postpone them until Britain tries to separate Italy from her new friendship with the Reich.

(The March 19 accord followed London conversations between France, Great Britain, Belgium and Italy concerning Germany's rearmament of the Rhineland. The powers proposed an international security and economic conference to consider Hitler's peace proposals, made at the time of the Rhineland action. The accord also proposed mutual assistance guarantees in the event of an international crisis.)

Officials said that Paris and Brussels had agreed they must obtain Britain's full guarantees as soon as possible so they could enter talks with Germany assured of permanent British backing.

The British viewpoint, as conveyed to the French government, was a reaffirmation that the Locarno obligations made at the London meeting give France and Belgium sufficient guarantees of aid in case of war with Germany.

France's objection, however, was that the Locarno pact ends when a new treaty takes its place, and that a five-power conference might result in Britain's lining up with Germany and Italy to force a new treaty without any such guarantees.

Therefore, France wants a definite guarantee of permanent assistance before treating with Germany.

Authoritative sources said both France and Belgium had notified Britain they desired the conference be held in Brussels July 22, despite Italy's refusal to participate without Germany.

The conference originally was set for Thursday of this week.

Hanging Is Held 'Early,' But Crusader Is on Hand

Exeter, England, July 15 (AP).—They hanged a mother of five in Exeter gaol an hour earlier than scheduled today, but Mrs. Violet Van Der Elst, blonde crusader against capital punishment, was there to protest.

The hanging was that of Mrs. Charlotte Bryant, who poisoned her husband. The time was advanced to avoid the demonstrations which have become increasingly more frequent at British hangings.

A crowd of 1,000, outside the prison gates, saw the wealthy widow's cream-colored limousine pull up, watched Mrs. Van Der Elst start to speak. A policeman stepped to the running board and Mrs. Van Der Elst's chauffeur drove to court.

There a magistrate fined her £5 for interfering with an officer, but refused the suggestion of Chief Constable F. Tarry that she be remanded for a mental examination.

Selling Beans? Tut-Tut.

Boston, July 15 (U.P.).—The licensing bureau today placed on file a complaint charging Walter Bunchaft, of Dorchester, with selling two cans of baked beans on the Lord's Day. An old law makes Sunday bean sales illegal. Sale of beer on the Sabbath is legal.

Even Dog Howls Outside Window When Defendant Cohen and Prosecutor O'Brien Offer 'Oh, My Baby!' in Fraud Case.

By the United Press.

Defendant Cohen and Prosecutor O'Brien, sitting on the same piano bench yesterday, played and sang for the benefit of the judge a plaintive melody of love, entitled "Oh, My Baby!"

The performance was unparalleled in the annals of American jurisprudence. It was unique in the world of music. It was terrible. It made the judge cringe, caused the official reporter to plunge his fingers in his ears and set a dog to howling outside the window.

"I want some service," warbled the dignified O'Brien as the curly-headed Cohen pounded the keys. "And by and by, oh, my baby, you'll know why!"

Their duet became necessary in the course of the Postoffice Department's consideration of fraud charges against Henry Cohen, of Hollywood, Calif., owner of the Universal Song Service. He accepts the lyrics of amateur composers and for $50 in advance sets music to them and tries to sell the result to the movies.

A Miss Lottie Perkins, of Denver, Colo., sent him the manuscript of "Oh, My Baby." Cohen wrote back that it looked fine to him and that as soon as she sent the $50 he'd go to work. Then it developed that Lottie Perkins was the pen name of the daughter of Willard Hawkins, magazine editor. At her father's suggestion, the evidence revealed, she wrote the worst poem she possibly could, submitted it to Cohen, and awaited results. Her father later wrote an article about the transaction.

"I reported to Lottie Perkins that her song contained an idea," Cohen testified. "I said I'd set it to music. In fact, I've done it!"

"Is it a good song" demanded Prosecutor W. C. O'Brien.

"It's a fine song," admitted Cohen. "I'll play it."

He moved to the piano, which had been installed in the hearing room, when O'Brien shouted:

"I object because Miss Perkins isn't here to hear it."

"There isn't any Miss Perkins," observed Horace Donnelly, Cohen's attorney.

It was a hot number, all hot-cha-cha Ta-de-dum-dum.

"Could you sing those last two lines?" asked O'Brien. "Those lines that go 'I'm gettin' nervous and you know why?'"

"I can't sing," said Cohen. "I can only play."

O'Brien set his horn-rimmed glasses firmly on his nose, scooted over to the piano, squeezed onto the bench with Cohen, and began to croon in a cracked monotone:

"I want some service. By and by, oh, my baby, you'll know why!"

"But this isn't the song that Lottie Perkins wrote," interposed Murray.

"Of course not," snapped Donnelly. "Cohen rewrote it. That's why he charges $50."

The latter testified, incidentally, that he'd made a small fortune from his own compositions, which he wrote and sold without benefit of his Universal Song Service. He said he got $15,000 for his tune, "Canadian Capers," and $18,000 for his "Why Dear?" Every once in a while, though, he said he wrote a sour one.

As for O'Brien, he's a good lawyer, but he'll never earn even $1.88 for his singing.

Hamilton Silent On K. K. K. 'Issue'

Montpelier, Vt., July 15 (U.P.).—Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee declined to comment tonight on a charge he supported the Ku Klux Klan-backed candidate in the 1924 Kansas gubernatorial campaign.

The charge was made earlier in the day at Parsons, Kans., by Clyde M. Reed, who was elected governor in the contest with Hamilton in 1928. Gov. Alf M. Landon, in whose behalf Hamilton is making a whirlwind tour of New England, was then Reed's campaign manager.

Hamilton had been quoted in New York as saying it was his opposition to the Ku Klux Klan in 1928 that cost him the Kansas governorship. Reed resented the statement and wired Hamilton accordingly.

Austro-Reich Pact to Change Arms Strategy

Military Experts Now View Former Empire as Buffer State.

By the United Press.

Vienna, July 15.—The Austro-German peace pact will result in wholesale scrapping of European military plans and construction of entirely new strategy, foreign military experts declared tonight.

The neutrality of Austria is considered absolutely secure, guaranteed by Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany and Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy. In event of a European war, it was pointed out, Austria would occupy a position similar to Belgium's during the World War.

Der Fuehrer's pledge not to attempt annexation of Austria is seen as clever strategy by which Austria becomes a neutral zone whose neutrality must be violated before the Little Entente or Soviet Russia could take effective action against the armies of the Third Reich.

This means that if Germany should become involved in war with Czechoslovakia, effective counteraction by other partners in the Little Entente as well as Russia would be possible only by marching troops across Austria or Hungary.

If Yugoslav forces went to the aid of Czechoslovakia they probably would find themselves trapped in a 65-mile bottle-neck stretch of territory between Hungary and Poland when Czechoslovakia joins Rumania.

Aid could not be rushed quickly to this territory because of poor communications between Russia, Yugoslavia and Rumania.

In these circumstances, military experts said, anti-Nazi states in the French alliance system must take steps to create a wider battle front against Germany now that Austria has been maneuvered into the position of a "central European Belgium."

With the apparent certainty that Italy would not act against Germany, France must attempt to whip her friends in the Little Entente into a position of solidarity.

It was believed that Czechoslovakia will open immediate political and military conversations with other members of the Little Entente and the French and Soviet high commands.

Ten Surrender In $7,000,000 Swindle Case

Are Released Under Bond; 14 Others May Give Up Before Week Ends.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Ten of the 24 men indicted by a Gainesville, Ga., federal grand jury in its investigation of a $7,000,000 stock swindle allegedly operated in a score of States has surrendered here today.

Attorney I. Harvey Levinson said most of the remaining 14 would give themselves up here before the end of the week.

Those who surrendered and were released under bonds aggregating $28,000 pending completion of removal proceedings before United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker were:

Joseph R. Mendelson, Leonard I. Sutterman and Joseph Sherman, of Detroit, bonds of $5,000 each; Frank Berger, Henry Bernstein, Meyer Wolfson, H. K. Neuberger and Max Oxman, $2,500 each; Theodore Sherman, of Detroit, a brother of Joseph, $1,500, and Lewis Ehrenberg, $1,000.

All were ordered to appear when removal proceedings are resumed July 28.

Charges of conspiracy and of using the mails to defraud were returned in 14 indictments which also named five defunct Chicago brokerage houses. The indictments were based on deals in Stutz Motor Car Co. stock two years ago, in which the Government charged "high pressure" telephone salesmen, operating from Chicago with branches through the South, Middle West and Northwest, sold shares on a partial payment basis.

The customers, it was charged, would pay 50 per cent down and the balance in 60 or 90 days.

"Then they would let the bottom drop out of the market," George Reynolds, head of the Chicago office of the Federal Securities and Exchange Commission, said in explaining the alleged procedure.

Television Rights Sought by Schenck

New York, July 15 (AP).—Basic television rights obtained by Britain's biggest film exhibiting organization were said by a well-informed British source today to be the main issue in negotiations launched here between American and British interests.

Joseph Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, an American concern, and Isdore Ostrer, president of the Gaumont-British Pictures Corporation, Ltd., are principals in a deal which Schenck has admitted is in process of negotiation.

Ostrer's organization, in which Twentieth Century-Fox already has a 49 per cent interest, is reported to have obtained a monopoly on the best television equipment in England and to have made a deal under which Radio Corporation of America will pay royalties for use of receiving sets here.

Since Ostrer's arrival here yesterday from Hollywood, the only word that either he or Schenck have uttered for publication is a statement by the American that "negotiations are progressing smoothly."

Montgomery Cites 100 Owners Failing to Obtain Dog License

County Police Open Intensive Campaign as April 1 Deadline Passes With Many Not Complying; $25 Fine or Jail Term May Be Imposed.

Nearly 10 dog owners of Montgomery County have been cited to appear in Montgomery County Police Court at Rockville, Md., for failure to obtain licenses for their pets. The deadline for obtaining dog licenses expired April 1 and county police are conducting a drive against those who failed to comply with the law.

The number of dog owners who failed to obtain tags this year was larger than any year before and the county commissioners ordered a widespread drive against offenders.

Persons cited must obtain the license tags and also are liable to a fine of $25 or a like number of days in jail. Licenses may be obtained at the county buildings in Silver Spring and Bethesda and at the office of the clerk of the police court in Rockville. Town tags are sold in Takoma Park, no county tags being necessary where town tags have been obtained. Takoma Park police also are conducting a drive against unlicensed dogs.

The county buildings were doing a land office business in dog tags yesterday when residents heard of the arrests of their neighbors. Many hurried to the county buildings to procure tags before the police got around to them.

Special policemen have been assigned in each substation to do nothing but run down violators of the dog law. These men are armed with the lists of all those who purchased dog licenses last year as well as a number of reports of persons who have failed to secure tags for new dogs.

The tags for male dogs cost $1 and those for females are $2.

Members of the Montgomery County Board of Education will meet tomorrow night with the executive and advisory committees of the Kensington Chamber of Commerce at the home of Washington I. Cleveland, president of the chamber, to consider selection of a site for a new junior high school in the Kensington vicinity.

President Cleveland said the school board would be urged to expedite construction of the new school, sought for several years. The last session of the State Legislature authorized a bond issue of $160,000 for the first unit of the school. The bonds have not been sold to date.

The school board also voted this week to sell at public auction abandoned school properties at Blair, White Oak and Burnt Mills colored schools.

World War Ahead, Lloyd George Says

Nottingham, England, July 15 (AP). Europe is retracing the path of 1914, David Lloyd George declared tonight.

Addressing his nonparty organization, the Council of Action for Peace and Reconstruction, the one-time premier ripped into the national government for the spirit "of despair" by which, he said, it was facing "the horrible prospect in front of mankind."

Saying the situation was "grave and becoming graver," Lloyd George continued:

"We are following the same steps which led in 1914 into the fires of Gehenna."

He assailed Premier Mussolini of Italy without mentioning him by name and asserted he believed Britain had little to fear from Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany.

"You are accumulating your bandages for a wound that may never be inflicted," he told his listeners.

"Germany may never attack Belgium or France.

"In fact, I don't think Hitler is a fool. He is not going to challenge the British Empire again by that act of folly."

Johnson then obtained a court order from Judge B. M. Hedrick to kill the animal, but Dr. Chichester interceded, and caught the dog. Now he is safe with the physician.

Ship Lines Sift Crash Periling 197 on Cruise

Nice Among Passengers When Freighter and Steamer Collided.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, July 15.—A vague report of a misunderstanding in signals spurred an official inquiry today into the cause of a collision between a freighter and a bay steamer carrying 197 passengers on a convention cruise.

The collision occurred about 10:30 o'clock last night off Seven Foot Knoll in the Chesapeake Bay. The outbound freighter Golden Harvest, loaded with steel, rammed its prow 10 feet into the side of the inbound steamer State of Virginia.

Watching Floor Show.

Aboard the steamer, members and guests of the Automobile Trade Association of Maryland were watching a floor show. Badly jolted by the impact, they scrambled for life preservers. Near-panic reigned until they transferred to the freighter.

Hours after the bruised and shaken passengers, including Gov. Harry W. Nice, had come safely ashore aboard the passing ferry boat Pittsburgh, the cause of the crash remained unexplained.

An officer of the steamer, declining to identify himself, said there had been a "mix-up in signals" between the two vessels. He refused to amplify his statement.

Capt. P. L. Parker, master of the State of Virginia, would not comment on the cause.

"The Golden Harvest struck us suddenly on the port side near midship," he said. "There was some confusion and after getting outside I found the vessels locked together."

Inquiry Is Urged.

Capt. Paul B. Tyler, of the board of steamboat inspectors, said he had begun an inquiry into the collision and that a formal hearing would follow.

Officials of the Old Bay Line, owners of the State of Virginia, said they also would investigate the crash. Executives of the Williams Line, agents for the Golden Harvest, were expected to do likewise.

The crews still were aboard the vessels tonight. The Virginia, with the Golden Harvest's prow jammed in her side, was grounded. There was a 30-foot hole in her side. Damage to the freighter was undetermined.

The passenger boat, a three-decker, was returning members of the trade association from a two-day convention at sea. The terrific impact brought the show to an abrupt halt. Some of the girls in the show became hysterical. Women passengers screamed and men turned from fun-making to kneel on the deck and pray for safety.

William A. Wells, jr., Baltimore, who was aboard, said the crash was "the closest shave I ever had."

The danger soon passed and the passengers regained their composure. Sergt. Manash Katz, of the State police, personal aid to Governor Nice, helped restore order by leading them in old-fashioned songs.

The ferry boat Pittsburgh took the passengers from the Golden Harvest and brought them to port. They had gone aboard the freighter soon after the collision.

Capt. W. I. Woodall of the Pittsburgh, veteran of many a bay rescue, said his latest one was "all in the day's work."

Nice Describes Crash.

Gov. Nice, smiling broadly as he came ashore, told of the crash as follows:

"It occurred about 10:45 p. m. off Seven-Foot Knoll. Everyone was in the main salon when the crash came. The next thing we heard four blasts of the boat whistle and men rushed to their staterooms.

"The freighter struck us on the port side, near one of the staterooms. The bulk of the freighter crashed clear through the stateroom and broke several pipes.

'I was sitting on a chair near the top of the stairs when it happened. The impact knocked me from the chair and everybody around me was either knocked down or jolted.

"We rushed down the stairs and there was a great deal of excitement. However, there was no hysteria among the many women passengers or panic.

"The captain of the Golden Harvest had the presence of mind to keep his motors running to keep the nose of his ship against the hole it had bored in our boat. It was two hours before we got help."

The Governor said the only injury he received was a bruised arm. Others reported similar hurts.

Wells said that while he was watching the floor show "there was a terrific crash."

People were thrown from chairs. Those standing up were thrown in heaps on the floor. The girls in the floor show became hysterical. Even men knelt down and prayed.

"There was an awful lurch of the boat, but after that the ship was still. Then it listed to starboard.

Fight Their Way Up.

"Members of the crew ran through the boat shouting orders to put on life preservers and go immediately to the boat deck.

"Women crying and men screaming fought their way through the companionways. They were flying past me like shot. They crowded up the steps yelling to the people in front to hurry.

"Officers assured the people that there was no immediate danger.

"The passengers became calm and orderly when they found that the ships were wedged fast together and were in no immediate danger of sinking. In about ten minutes they began to transfer the passengers to the Golden Harvest, which had not been damaged as badly as the State of Virginia.

"They were all jovial after they got over. The nervous tension was over, and they were ready to joke about it."

John E. Raine, general manager of the Automobile Trade Association, viewed the near-disastrous end of the organization's outing as a "mighty close shave."

"If the freighter had been going five knots faster," he said, "it would have sliced us in two."

Webster Elected Head of Shriners

Seattle, July 15 (AP).—A Detroit judge, Clyde I. Webster, reached Shrinedom's highest office today, "hurdling" a year in the 10-year succession up the ranks of the imperial divan.

Withdrawal for business and health reasons of Hugh M. Caldwell, of Seattle's Nile Temple, after his election as imperial potentate, permitted elevation of Judge Webster, a Wayne County, Mich., circuit judge, to the position.

The delegates elected William M. Woodfield, of Islam Temple, San Francisco, imperial captain of the guard and Judge George Towe, Buffalo, N. Y., imperial outer guard, the "starting point" on the divan. He is judge of the county court, Erie County, Buffalo, N. Y., and Ismalia Temple's first imperial office holder since 1904.

Tomorrow the imperial divan will be installed by "Uncle" Lou B. Winsor, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a senior past imperial potentate, in the convention's last official business.

Envoy to Russia Speaks at Pageant Depicting Patriot's Life.

By the Associated Press.

Hanover Courthouse, Va., July 15. His native Hanover County relived in pageantry today the stirring days that heard the oratory of its most illustrious son, Patrick Henry, hailed as one who "incarnated the American love of liberty; liberty for all."

William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to Russia and personal representative of President Roosevelt at the bicentennial of Henry's birth, classed the silver-tongued Virginian with Washington and Jefferson as the "imperishably great" of the revolutionary period.

Bullitt, speaking before the first performance of a colorful pageant depicting Henry's life, linked his fervor for freedom with modern problems and called on America to "restore democracy in opportunity."

He urged lovers of liberty to eliminate from "our national life the stagnation and misery which is produced when too much of our national income goes into the pockets of the privileged and too little into the hands of the underprivileged."

The pageant was enacted in an open-air theater in which slide screens were used to recall realistically the background of Henry's career from a troubled beginning, when he failed as a farmer and as a country storekeeper, through his brilliant career as a lawyer and fame as a fiery patriot.

A thousand men and women of Hanover County and vicinity represented the many characters provided in the script prepared by T. Beverley Campbell, of Richmond.

James Bell, Virginia-born actor who made a reputation in the New York productions of "The Last Mile" and "Tobacco Road," was the only professional in the cast. He entered into the role of Henry, his first venture into historical parts, with enthusiasm.

The pageant will be repeated Thursday and Friday evenings. Senator Carter Glass will be guest of honor at the final ball after speaking at the homecoming program Friday.

Promoting Temperance.

Washingtonians may profitably study the annual report of the District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, dealing especially with the social effects of the repeal of prohibition. In several respects the data assembled reflect the wisdom of the choice made three years ago, but the board candidly admits that much remains to be accomplished.

Arrests for intoxication in the fiscal year 1936 were considerably below the peak reached during the final breakdown of prohibition. But the percentage of the local population arrested for this offense last year is still considerably higher than it was during most of the so-called dry years. The encouraging aspect of the report is that the trend is in the right direction. A sharp reduction is also indicated in the cases of juvenile intoxication.

The board quotes Traffic Director Van Duzer to the effect that repeal has not substantially affected the traffic situation. But the record shows a steady rise in the number of accidents caused by drunken drivers since 1932 and arrests for this offense have jumped from 265 then to 398 in the year ended June 30. To some extent this increase may be explained by the larger number of automobiles on the streets and a more vigorous enforcement of the law. Nevertheless, it suggests that one very serious aspect of the liquor problem is a long way from being solved.

In general the board considers its record of the past two years "a fair beginning." But every day, says the report, "emphasizes the necessity for proper and effective temperance education." It continues: "There is no place in our modern setup for the drunken or intoxicated man. Besides being the object of most complete disgust, he is a genuine menace to himself and others. The board will not tolerate the sale of beverages to anyone who is in any degree intoxicated."

A large measure of commendation is due the board for its maintenance of strict control over the sale of spirits in the District. Its aim is to minimize debauchery and prevent a recurrence of the conditions which led to prohibition. Of course, no single agency can make an entire city temperate. But through persistent and strict enforcement of reasonable control measures the A. B. C. Board has demonstrated that notable improvements in that line can be effected.

A Swelling Bubble.

It is difficult to realize that the befuddled doctor, who recently walked out of a Congressional committee in order to avoid further embarrassing questions, is today the center of attraction in a hilarious semi-political convention. Yet such is the fact. Not one whit discouraged by the House's withering exposure of the racket he is perhaps unwittingly sponsoring, Dr. Townsend has assembled 15,000 followers in Cleveland to plot his future course of action.

Washington recognized the Townsend Plan as a vicious nostrum, intended to elicit money from gullible adherents, long before the Congressional inquiry was held. When the detailed operations of the O. A. R. P. had been revealed, there was no longer the slightest doubt as to the nature of this hoax. But a large number of individuals either ignored the findings or naively assumed that the California doctor had been traduced by the spite of black reactionaries.

The apparent failure of the Congressional investigation to discourage Townsendism may be surprising to many. But seasoned observers realize that millions of people are absolutely convinced that there is a pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. It is this national credulity which has given the Townsend movement its strength and which now makes it a major menace to practical old-age pension legislation.

There is something absolutely fantastic in the proposal for a Constitutional amendment to legalize the Townsend Plan, on the assumption that the obstacles to its efficacy are merely legal. But the tragi-comedy is not yet apparent to thousands of trusting individuals who take Townsendism at face value. Indeed, nothing that is said or done in Washington is likely to convince the would-be pensioners of California and other States that the quest for $200 individual monthly gratuities is hopeless. Apparently that task of enlightenment must be performed by local organizations, individuals and the rural press.

Sooner or later all bubbles of this sort burst, but if they are permitted to swell to large proportions the explosion will leave real suffering and bitter disillusionment in its wake. It is time for leaders of both parties to work out some new strategy to protect the public from those who are so cruelly exploiting human ignorance.

A Step Toward Credit Control.

The increase of 50 per cent in the reserve requirements of member banks, effective August 15, is expected to cut excess reserves from an anticipated total of approximately $3,500,000,000 to about $1,900,000,000.

As the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system explains in its official announcement of the impending increases, excess reserves are the funds held by member banks on deposit with the Federal Reserve Banks in excess of the amounts required by law. Of course, each dollar of excess reserves constitutes the basis of a potential credit expansion of several times that amount.

Even after the new requirements have gone into effect, the volume of excess reserves will be greater, it is pointed out, than at any time prior to the recent large gold imports. In fact, they will still be great enough to support a dangerously large expansion of credit.

The mere fact that the board of governors has taken an initial step toward heading off credit inflation before it has gone beyond control is an encouraging development, even though the immediate effect is not likely to be great. It does, however, hold out hopes that the board will have the courage to exercise a more positive kind of restraint if this proves desirable later on. Two courses of action would then be open: either a further increase in legal reserves until they amount to twice the requirements of August, 1935, or resort to open-market sales of Government securities.

The official statement indicates that the latter method is the one that would be relied upon, since it is impracticable and unsettling to the banks to have their reserve requirements subject to frequent changes. The board of governors, therefore, emphasizes the desirability of relying on the "traditional methods of credit control through discount policy and particularly through open market operations." By cutting excess reserves to a figure below $2,000,000,000, moreover, these reserves are brought "within the scope of control." The Reserve system now holds $2,430,000,000 of United States securities. By selling these holdings in the open market, the Reserve Banks could "mop up" the surplus cash reserves of the member banks to any desired extent.

Since excess reserves are now well distributed among member banks, while individual and institutional investors have an abundance of idle funds, this first step toward credit control is not likely to arouse any noteworthy opposition, although it may temporarily have an unsettling effect upon the market for Government securities. Its tendency in the long run will be to strengthen investor confidence. For it is a definite move to sterilize the excess reserves due to gold imports—accessions resulting partly from devaluation of the dollar and more recently from the flight of capital from France and other gold-bloc countries.

The real test of the efficacy of the Reserve system's efforts to prevent an excessive expansion of credit would come with the adoption of control policies hindering the Government in financing the budgetary deficit easily and cheaply. It is hardly conceivable that the Reserve authorities would try to sell large amounts of Government securities in the open market, thereby depressing the market value of outstanding Government issues and tending to raise borrowing rates on prospective issues, while the Government remains a large borrower.

Thus we come back once more to the dangerously weak spot in our present financial procedure—the failure to balance the budget. So long as the Treasury is compelled at frequent intervals to float new loans to cover recurrent deficits, cheap and abundant credit must be regarded as the chief desideratum. Governmental needs are quite certain, under such circumstances, to take precedence over the long-range interests of the country.

Credit control measures, however desirable in themselves, cannot provide adequate safeguards against inflation, if the Government is pursuing an uncontrolled spending policy that points inescapably toward collapse of the credit and currency system.

Getting Stock Swindlers.

The Securities and Exchange Commission has secured the indictment of over a score of individuals and several corporations allegedly engaged in swindling operations which have netted profits in excess of $10,000,000 during the last three years.

It did not require the passage of the securities act, or the law regulating stock exchange trading, to make the acts of which these individuals and concerns are accused illegal offenses. But without such painstaking and expert research as the Securities and Exchange Commission is prepared to undertake, the difficulties in the way of uncovering the nefarious activities of bucket shop operators and fraudulent stock manipulators are almost insuperable.

The work of the S. E. C. is primarily designed to provide the public with full information regarding new security issues and to elevate trading standards on the stock exchanges. Nevertheless, the swindlers on the fringes of the legitimate regulated activities, which are the main concern of the commission, take a tremendously heavy toll from the credulous and ignorant members of society. The pitiful eagerness with which a fake scheme, such as the Townsend pension plan, is seized upon and clung to is indicative of the ease with which fake promoters and fake security dealers can reap a rich harvest.

Mere publicity will not afford adequate protection against the exploitation of people who are unable to recognize the methods of the swindlers. The only way to provide the needed protection is to run down the malefactors and bring them to the bar of justice. The S. E. C. deserves credit for the vigor with which it has addressed itself to this task.

Resurgent Germany.

Another express stipulation of the Treaty of Versailles has gone into the discard. It is Article 115 of that now largely historic document, providing for destruction of the fortifications on the little island of Heligoland and concluding that: "These fortifications, military establishments and harbors shall not be reconstructed; nor shall any similar works be constructed in future."

Reports that the Reich is now rebuilding the defenses on this North Sea outpost, compulsorily destroyed "by German labor and at the expense of Germany" after the war, have been current for some time. This week they have been officially confirmed by a statement in the British Parliament from Viscount Cranborne, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs. Asked by what authority the German government is taking this action, he replied that the island "is not being fortified by leave of anybody."

That statement was not entirely correct. Heligoland, which served as a valuable German submarine and aircraft base during the war, is being fortified by leave and under orders from Der Fuehrer himself. It is true that his action is definitely in defiance of Germany's treaty obligations, but it is equally true that those obligations now have no more binding force than Germany wishes to accord them. This was coming to be the case even before Mussolini defied the world to restrain him from violating solemn pledges which Italy had made voluntarily. The precedent successfully established by the Italian dictator is now, as was predicted, proving exceedingly useful in helping Hitler to shake off undesirable treaty restrictions.

On the heels of the Heligoland action the British government has invoked the "escalator" clause of the 1930 naval treaty with the United States and Japan, thus saving 40,000 tons of destroyers which would otherwise have been scrapped by the end of the year. The connection between the two events is obvious, but aside from speeding their naval and air defense there is nothing the British are likely to do about this illegal fortification. And if the nation at which the step is directed does nothing, nobody else is likely to protest.

So Hitler successfully surmounts another hurdle in the long course which he has mapped out to re-establish Germany's dominant pre-war position in Europe. Heligoland follows on the heels of the accord whereby Vienna "agrees to bring its political policies" into conformity with "the principle that Austria professes herself to be a German state." Prior to that, Berlin had made much headway in detaching Danzig from supervision by the League of Nations and had successfully remilitarized the Rhineland. All these accomplishments are the direct result of the favorable diplomatic position which Mussolini presented to Hitler through the agency of his Ethiopian war.

These steps, of course, are only the beginning of German resurgence. How far they will eventually go none can predict, though a fairly good indication is contained in the pages of Mein Kampf, in which Hitler candidly outlined his long-range plans. If the future steps are carried through with the facility and good fortune attending those already accomplished it may not be very long before German sway, actual or implicit, extends from the Baltic to the Balkans. The Drang nach Osten is at work again. A great Germanized Mittel-Europa can no longer be regarded as a fantastic dream of empire building.

In this development there will be a constant risk of war, but no necessity for hostilities so long as Hitler's careful step-by-step program is not challenged by active external resistance. To avert this he is now building defenses against the French army in the Rhineland, and against the British fleet at Heligoland. Behind this screen, and with the added protection of a mighty air fleet, German diplomacy is burrowing busily at a dozen focal points.

Man isn't so smart. Thousands of years before he began to have headaches from trying to think, the turtle had a streamlined body, turret top, retractable landing gear, and a portable house.

Streamlining is to be recommended in many instances, but not in the case of the average voter. He has too little wind resistance.

The Little Fellows.

Stephen Gwynn in the Hungarian Quarterly.

Freedom within the community of nations for each member of the community; the same freedom that each member of the community claims for itself; that is the only basis on which the League of Nations can continue to be of service to its members. The Great Powers have less concern for freedom as a right; they have it de facto. It is the small nations who most realize the worth of freedom, for it is a possession that they hold perilously. Their best way to secure it is to be guardians and supporters, not only for their own, but of each other's rights. And of these rights, not each individual, but some central tribunal must be the judge.

The Drought.

MERCURY AT 119 DEGREES HIGH AS DROUGHT SPREADS MISERY; U. S. ADVISES LIVESTOCK SALE.

Two of these columns give an account of the Indians using their ancient rites to pray for rain, which was granted.

One cannot help but wonder at the drought condition of our land, but it ceases to be a wonder when we recall that at the beginning of this Administration, thousands of cattle, as well as tons of grain, were destroyed. And at the same time we had people literally starving, yet the Government was "hell bent" to increase prices by curtailment of production, even paying farmers not to cultivate their land.

It is not to be wondered that we now have the drought, but the sad part is that those poor unfortunate people in the affected sections must now suffer. They abided by the will of the Government and failed to cultivate their lands.

This Administration is supposed to be a God-fearing one. No doubt there are few of them, but I am thinking that as an American citizen (who is not privileged to vote), our Government needs to go back, pray God for forgiveness for destroying the products of His soil, and, like the Indians, pray for release from this drought.

In reality, the Indians are showing more faith in God (even though many of them do not know our God) than our American Government, which, on taking office, pledges loyalty on an open Bible.

God forgive such an Administration and grant that our Honorable President may yet awake to his responsibilities as a leader of a people founded on faith in God.

MRS. GERTRUDE M. DONOVAN.

"Are We Going Or Coming?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thanks be to our forefathers for writing in the Constitution freedom of speech and press. This has been the foundation of our progress. Since we still have it I would like to express my thoughts.

Thousands of dollars were spent to beautify the National Park for the President's visit. This reminds me of a story I once read about the Prince of Wales visiting India. Millions of dollars of the peasants' earnings were spent and the streets were covered with linen, and the town was decorated with gorgeous colors to please the prince's eye, but they didn't let the prince really see the millions of subjects starving each year for the lack of attention. They paid so much taxes there was nothing left to improve themselves.

The Ida Valley rehousing project is like that. Twenty cottages are being distributed over one large farm that was so poor the former owner could scarcely make a living on all of it. So how do they expect 20 families to live on a few acres even after they pay off their $2,000 or $3,000 for it?

I would like the Administration to explain whether we are going or coming. They pay big landlords to let their land lie idle, and then they swing around and buy horses for a bunch of unemployed, reckless fellows who don't even own a decent harness. All the security the Government has is the horses, and everyone knows what they will look like after a year or so with skimpy food and patched up harness. They will look like a taxpayer.

LESTER RUFFNER.
Luray, Va., July 13.

"Unflattering" Poll.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Gallup poll indicating a trend toward Landon is bas-reliefing the composite American voter in one of his least flattering poses. Wholly barren of gratitude for the structure-saving efforts of the President, we are ungraciously turning our backs upon him in his hour of success.

Then, to be doubly ungracious, and to insure that anthropologists of future generations shall find no microscopic traces of a sense of fairness in our national makeup, we turn, not to a leader of like promise, but instead set up an untested and unknown fledgling to enjoy for four years the fruits of Roosevelt's achievements.

R. B. O'DONNELL.

Labor's View of Company Unions.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Observer" is very indifferent, to the welfare of others; only a sadist would make exaggerated statements and force people to continue a controversy in a region where the heat is near 100 in the shade.

First, the so-called "flying squadrons" were not thugs, and they were not foreigners, and probably not more than one in two hundred were inclined to take Karl Marx seriously. These mill workers were more American than the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, and decidedly more intelligent. To quote a Southern labor historian:

The ancestors of the new working class in the Piedmont section of the new South came from the class upon whose backs was built the whole edifice of British capitalism: Scotch, English and Irish peasants. They fled from Great Britain to escape the horrors of the factory system. They fled to escape the unspeakable misery which rising capitalism brought to the masses of Great Britain and from which they found relief, to some extent at least, in the colonies of the new world.

So, when the offspring of these indentured slaves were finally caught a few hundred years later in the same system their ancestors tried to escape, they resorted to the only weapon they had—the strike. How these American workers were treated by their rulers forms a dark page in labor history.

That violent reprisal against peaceful picketing was the answer given by the kind "robber barons" to men who were not nearly as foreign as Kosciusko and Lafayette, to name only two foreigners who aided the early American rebels against the British.

Second, the unions could hardly be blamed for not turning out more skilled laborers than our present mechanized society could use. There is generally a surplus of skilled labor listed on every large relief roll and work project in the country. Also the crisis caused many workers who would normally have followed a trade to neglect it and take up the bread line, the highway and the CCC camp.

If there is a demand for skilled labor at the present time, a demand that in some regions exceeds the supply, we must realize that it is by no means a permanent condition and is caused in many instances by the projects of the New Deal. This is a fact that should be apparent to Republicans, anarchists, Coughlinites, monarchists and New Dealers. Never in our wildest dreams can we imagine the day when private employment will be able to care for and pay a living wage to the surplus American workers. Under such circumstances it would be folly for the unions to train workers for jobs which do not exist and cannot exist until our social planning catches up with our technological advance.

"Observer" must realize that company unions are not created to give representation to the workers, but to see that control of the union is in the hands of the management, represented in most cases by a stool-pigeon office force. The Danville (Va.) strike was an excellent example of the failure of "Observer's" benevolent company-controlled welfare.

The Nursing Profession.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The portrayal of the story of Florence Nightingale, which is being given in a local theater just now, should offer more than simple entertainment to those who see it.

Many a physician will wince at the antagonism which the medical profession exhibited to Florence Nightingale; but many a conscientious nurse will see in this portrayal of a nurse's fight for consideration of human suffering, that not yet has the medical profession given proper credit to the nurse in serious illness or accident.

If Florence Nightingale could by her genius reduce a death rate from 57 per cent to 5 per cent, the medical profession should recognize, what the laity long have recognized, that of the two forces for recovery in today's hospitalization, the nurse is the more important factor, notwithstanding that she works under a physician's orders. The quick and often superficial visit of the physician would be utterly inadequate, but for the nurse who stands by in all emergencies and faithfully as well as expertly comes to the rescue when crises arise in serious illness.

On the other hand, many a flippant and giddy nurse, utterly oblivious of her responsibilities, must wince to see how Florence Nightingale, in the picture, scorns such blights upon the profession. We need today the Florence Nightingale spirit to arouse the average physician to the necessity of a proper estimation of the faithful, conscientious nurse; but we need her just as much, to clean up the nursing profession of a lot of gold-digging, trivial girls, who fawn over wealthy patients.

The nurse is not made by her training, any more than doctors or preachers are made by their professional schools. All of them must have, to begin with, the instinct of the profession they would follow. Florence Nightingale set a high standard. Worthy womanhood may well feel proud to wear a nurse's uniform. She is a poor example of that profession who does anything to lower that standard.

The Futility Of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Twenty years ago we fought to save democracy for the people; today we must fight to save the people for democracy. We are all acquainted with the devastation, the strife and the economic and social results of every war. We have seen the morals not only of our own people but of the world, suffer because of the social unrest which is stimulated by these conflicts.

Alliances, treaties, ententes, proposals of peace and plans of international justice go on trying in vain to make men realize the futility of war. I cannot believe the peoples of the world want war, and yet leaders throughout these so-called civilized nations are instigating friction. There are some who profess the philosophy that these alliances and means to prevent war are in vain for the reason that it is inherent for man to fight. This, I believe, cannot be true.

During the past year or so we have witnessed aggression in Africa; we have seen it in Outer Mongolia and North China and recently, through the repudiation of the Locarno Pact, we have had it threatened at least on the continent of Europe. Each nation seems willing to offer peace and friendship. But how can such proposals be accepted conscientiously when war machines are being perfected constantly because of fear from other nations?

If the people of the world are desirous of peace, then it must be true that underlying interests instrumental in negotiating war are ultimately receiving profits from these inhuman conflicts engaged in by humans. The quicker they are weeded out the better for society, but until this is done let us carry on the crusade and not falter or be led astray through fallacious reasoning or sophistical propaganda.

Eleazer Or Louis?

Post Office, Thursday.

Q.—If Michel Ney, Marshal of France, was not Peter Ney, schoolmaster, of North Carolina, who was the Rev. Eleazer Williams, of Wisconsin?

A.—Have it your own way—he was the Lost Dauphin, alias Louis XVII.

* * *

We knew the question would be forthcoming when we ventured, the other day, to hint our doubts about the endeavors of those Carolinians who propose the exhumation of the pedagogue's body, seeking to identify Peter Ney with "The Bravest of the Brave." So we had the reply all ready.

And now we have duly received the inquiry.

* * *

When this columnist was a very small boy he found in the attic at home a dusty pile of old copies of Putnam's Mazagine. In one of these was what must have been an early Williams-Bourbon blast. We recall an illustration—a woodcut of the Rev. Eleazer, showing him to have possessed a really Bourbonesque cast of countenance.

The bibliography of the legend includes J. H. Hanson's "Lost Prince," E. E. Evahs' "Story of Louis XVII," William Wight's "Eleazer Williams," Mary Hartwell Catherwood's romantic novel—and (oh, of course!) Meade Minnigerode's "Son of Marie Antoinette."

* * *

When, however, you have read every one of these learned works, what have you that is indisputable concerning Williams?

* * *

Just these facts:

That, as a small boy ostensibly from Chaughnawaga, N. Y., he went to private schools, first at Long Meadows and then at West Hampton, Mass.

That he was ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal Church and did excellent missionary work among the Indians.

That, during the War of 1812, he served commendably as superintendent of what was then the Northern Indian Department.

That, when the Oneidas were settled at the Green Bay Reservation, in 1822, he accompanied them.

That, perhaps because of the talk about his supposed Bourbon origin, the Prince de Joinville had with him, in 1841, an interview of which neither participant had much to say for publication—this Prince de Joinville being the third son of Louis Philippe.

That Williams returned to New York for a time, in 1850, and translated the Book of Common Prayer into Iroquois in 1853.

And that he subsequently resided, and in 1857 died, at De Pere, Brown County, Wis., about 100 miles north of Milwaukee.

* * *

Was he the son of Thomas Williams, Indian?

Or the son of Louis XVI?

* * *

Everybody knows the revolutionists' version of that Dauphin's imprisonment:

The child's solitary confinement in a dark cell of the Temple in 1792, the food shoved through the barred doorway, the absence of any visitor for the first six months—the illness reported in the first days of May, 1795—the announcement of the death on May 8—the peculiar report of that autopsy upon a body which, said the cautious surgeons, "the commissioners told us was the late Louis Capet's son"—death the result of "a scrofulous affection of long standing"—the cremation—the burial of the ashes in an unmarked grave of the Ste. Marguerite's Cemetery.

* * *

Yet also plenty of candidates for the role of a surviving Dauphin. There were 40—up to and including the Mississippi raftmate of Huckleberry Finn.

* * *

What of the Comte de Richemont's claims, first advanced at Paris in 1828? A clever lawyer could make the alleged reasons for de Richemont's seven years' jail term at Milan look rather thin.

And Karl Wilhelm Naundorff! He said Barras—to please Josephine Beauharnais, afterwards Napoleon's wife—hid the Dauphin (to wit, Karl Wilhelm) in "a high room" of the Temple—put first a wooden figure, then a deaf mute and then a boy doomed by scrofula, in the Dauphin's cell, shortly whereafter Karl was carried out in a coffin. His tombstone, at Delft, calls him "Roi de France."

* * *

Yes, you have a pretty wide choice in Lost Dauphins.

But why make it?

* * *

Don't you remember how the overrated Oscar Wilde was believed to have been smuggled—Heaven knows why—away from his Paris hospital, and somebody else buried in his stead? Wasn't George Sylvester Viereck sure he saw the Titanic's commander in New York during the autumn of 1913?

It's one of life's prettiest puzzles—how hundreds of people who eagerly reject the Bible's account of the Resurrection will argue with all their breath for the survival of some entirely mortal being.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

The Hangover Virus.

My admiration goes to those colleagues in the writing business who compose the "ads" for liquor and cigarettes, two commodities long associated in the public mind with vice and human failure. The cigarette has earned a degree of respectability since the day it was called the "coffin nail," and a few doctors of respectable professional standing, in loose moments, have gone so far as to say that one cigarette under certain conditions, may have a sedative effect. All medical opinion insists, however, that whisky is no beverage but medicine, to be measured by the drop or spoonful and taken only in urgent circumstances. Used for social refreshment, it does things to the arteries, the liver and the duodenum, to say nothing of the judgment and morals of the subject, and even the fondest devotees are unable to argue the contrary.

Obviously, there would be very little money in a cigarette industry adjusted to a maximum consumption of one cigarette per customer in special emergencies, and a liquor trade based solely on medical, rather than social, requirements, would be just no trade at all.

One package of cigarettes might last a family a whole month and a quart of whiskey would stand in the bathroom cabinet along with the castor oil, iodine and court plaster.

* * * *

All our citizens of 40 years and up will remember that in their youth there were local anticigarette leagues which propagated the idea that cigarettes destroyed chcaracter and will power, poisoned the blood and brain and brought willful young men to early graves of tuberculosis. A youth who smoked as many as ten cigarettes a day was a cigarette fiend, and employers always looked at the fingers of prospetcive office boys for the telltale yellow stain, commonly attributed to nicotine, which offset all testimonials of character and zeal from high school principals, pastors and previous bosses.

Against this great prejudice and against the universal knowledge that cigarettes are not good for people the industry has grown stupendously in 30 years, and the clientele has taken in millions of women—an advance now noted in the liquor trade as well.

I have marveled at the tact, restraint and delicacy of advertising copy commending such problem merchandise to a public thoroughly familiar, largely through personal experience, with the unpleasant effect of indulgence. It would be worse than useless to say that a cigarette or a brand of whisky improves the health if consumed in pay load quantities, and certainly no producer would have the effrontery to argue an actual human need in either case. So the approach is made from quite another direction, ignoring the question of necessity and dealing with the devil-may-care nature of the consumer.

* * *

Cigarettes are associated in the ads with pretty girls in bathing suits and handsome, athletic males, hired from the agency for $8 a day, to pose in country club surroundings or driving snappy roadsters, borrowed from the local dealer off the floor. The text of the copy is based on subtle suggestion rather than positive claim, and while nobody ever is told that cigarettes improve the fitness of competing athletes, you gather that certain cigarettes are always harmless.

So in the face of medical testimony and of an old prejudice of almost religious fury, the cigarette trade has become a major industry whose sudden abolition in the interests of public hygiene, if that were possible, would be a calamity worse than the drought and hopper plagues and the dust storms of the grain and grazing country.

The whisky copy has been aware of class distinctions. There are aristocratic family groups toasting the holidays in honest respectability, with the butler beaming in the background over the tray, to advertise the expensive, bonded stuff.

* * *

But there are also rugged, heart-to-heart ads for 90-cent liquor explaining that this is good conscientious whisky, not a day under 1 year old, diluted with pure, wholesome alcohol and backed by the fine old prestige of a plain, American corporation which loves its fellow men.

In between I have noticed an interesting series of ads striking a folksy, father-and-the-boys note in which the distiller and his sons, raised in a homely whisky household, pledge their family honor to their brand of grog and impart an unspoken family blessing on their trade. The family seems to be involved in a great distillery corporation, and I don't quite understand how father and the boys retain their family integrity, but maybe that is none of my business.

Cigarettes have been much improved, for they no longer cause sore throats or lung trouble, and it has been definitely established that they do not make dirty little street corner loafers of all who take the first false step. Bankers and district attorneys, and even United States judges, indorse, by their local party leaders, some cigarettes. They also drink whisky, but there is still some room for improvement in the product. Suffering humanity yearns for the announcement that science in a white jacket, puzzling over the coils and test tubes in the ads, has discovered the hangover virus and eliminated the same.

Pay Increase Reported For Farm Hands by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The Bureau of Agricultural economics reported yesterday farm hands in New England, Middle Atlantic, East North Central and Pacific States were receiving the highest pay in five years.

Elsewhere, the bureau said, the supply of farm hands exceeds the demands, but by a closer margin than in several years.

Wages in the New England States averaged $30.27 a month with board; Middle Atlantic States $26.64; East North Central States, $26.40, and Pacific States, $40.33. Wages without board were $10 to $20 a month higher.

Uncertain France

Whether Nation Will Swing Toward Communism Or Conservatism Is Unpredictable With Riot Sufficient To Swing Balance.

By Andre Vulliet.

Paris.

TO FIGURE out what the immediate future holds for France, as between communism on one hand and a conservative reaction on the other, is impossible.

That the Communists would have a chance of succeeding if they chose to seize the power and stage a sort of coup d'etat is emphasized by the relative ease with which the workers of Paris and its suburbs, mostly Communists, occupied the factories, shops and stores during the recent stay-in strikes. They merely hampered business, but upon an order from their unions, they could have paralyzed transportation and communication services overnight and made a coup possible. This at least is the opinion openly expressed by many impartial observers.

Whether they could keep the power, however, is more questionable. It must not be forgotten that, despite their sweeping gains in the recent general election, the Communists totaled but 15 per cent of the votes. Even with the Socialists, who seem to be acting hand in glove with them on many issues, they represent only one-third of the French electorate. The majority of the French people are still conservative, progressive or liberal. Therefore a reaction is also possible. It would certainly come after a real Communist or Socialist revolution. But in the latter case, it would probably not be possible without a certain amount of rioting or bloodshed.

Success Of Strikes Aids Communists.

AMONG the factors which tend to strengthen communism in France are the following:

The measures recently adopted, including the 40-hour work week, paid holidays for workers, an increase in salaries and the closed-shop system and collective bargaining, gave the workers nearly all they asked for. These measures were adopted with the support of the government, to be sure, but under the initiative of the Communists, who started and supported the strike movement even before the new French government of Leon Blum was formed.

The result is that, until they find out that it may not work so well in the long run, workers have two strong convictions.

One is that it was the Communists who did the trick, and if they give orders for some more striking they may obtain even more advantages. The other is that force is above right, as, through the use of coercion, they were able to obtain that which they had been seeking to get peacefully for years.

The stay-in strikes created a disquieting precedent in that they struck a blow to the rights of property and liberty. "Next time we'll work the factories ourselves," some enthusiastic workers declared. Although unauthorized, this opinion nevertheless showed a certain state of mind. Moreover, the strikes shed light upon the fact that, whether they liked it or not, workers had to obey orders from leaders who did not always belong to regular trade unions. The situation more than once got out of the hands of the Federation of Labor.

The measures recently enforced will probably result in paving the way to a state economy, as most enterprises whose benefits are not large enough to cover the 35 per cent additional charges resulting from the new working conditions will have to depend on the government's help or close down. This may mean the gradual elimination of private profit and an ever-increasing government interference in the industrial field.

The very changes in the attitude of the French Communist party during the last year or so are meant to make Communism more palatable to a larger number of Frenchmen and extend its influence beyond the class of industrial workers. It appears that the French Communism has very cleverly merged its economic doctrine with the nationalistic sentiment. To make friends with many a little fellow, the Communists have coined such new slogans as the following: "We Communists love our country," "We want France to be strong, free and happy, and we will make her so," "Long live the republican army," and they speak of the "union of the French nation" and of "national reconciliation."

Such an attitude may placate a good many people. Whether it is sincere, however, is another question, and most observers doubt that the Communists have given up their political aim, which is the overthrow of the bourgeoise regime. "We will constitute a ministry of the masses," Vaillant Couturier, a Communist spokesman, recently declared.

They may eventually do it with relative ease, in view of the fact that the new French government, formed to represent three different political parties, has not made clear its attitude toward possible labor troubles or mass demonstrations.

"Rather than be in opposition with the labor class, this government will resign," French Premier Blum declared in the Chamber of Deputies, also adding that "his government would not use force against workers." But he also asserted that he was firmly determined to ensure order in the streets" and that "no reoccupation of factories would be allowed in the future."

All this might lead the Communists to try their chance whenever they saw fit, all the more so that it seems they ought to be able to paralyze Paris almost overnight. With an army of more than 500,000 Communist voters in and around Paris they have a sort of "red belt" with which they could encircle Paris long enough to stage a coup d'etat or set up a dictatorship of the labor class.

Conservatism Still Runs Deep Through Nation.

THESE are the Communist or revolutionary trump cards, but it does not appear they are strong enough to win the game in the long run. The conservative hand is still good enough to make a winning rally.

Of course, Paris is the nerve center of France, the seat of the government and the business headquarters of the country. Therefore, it is rather a disquieting factor that it should be under the menace of its "red" suburbs, and that 32 out of its 60 deputies should be Communists. But Paris does not represent all of France.

While in Paris alone and its suburbs the Communist votes represented roughly 40 to 45 per cent of the electoral forces, in the rest of France the proportion dwindled to an average 11 per cent. This is one of the reasons why, to increase their electoral goodwill, the Communists had to adapt their platform to the French temperament.

It is fair to assume that a good many people voted the Communist ticket because they wanted a change. But the economic measures sponsored by the government are likely to raise the cost of living, kill the tourist business and affect the country's foreign trade. If the change is for the worse, the same voters will soon show their discontent.

Another factor which in the long run may also work against the present state of things is that the new Blum government of France seems inclined to play class politics. If it embarks upon the policy of one class, it will soon dissatisfy many. One-sided measures against political groups, street parades or patriotic leagues may stir the sense of justice of a large body of public opinion and make the atmosphere favorable for a national regrouping of all the conservative forces against communism.

A slight incident on some purely ideological or political matter, a street clash, a question of the red flag versus the blue-white-and-red French flag may develop into something big. When so many people are nervous and overexcited, anything might happen.

New Filing Forms Sent Out by SEC

By the Associated Press.

New forms for registration of brokers and dealers in "over-the-counter" security markets were issued yesterday by the Securities Exchange Commission in line with a recent statutory change in requirements.

The 5,785 brokers and dealers registered under previous regulations need not file new registrations, the commission said, but letters calling attention to the new rules were sent to 5,000 persons in the securities business who had not registered under the old requirement.

Under the new provisions, the letters said, all brokers or dealers who use the mails or other channels of interstate commerce to induce purchase or sale except upon a registered security exchange must be registered. The former test was use of interstate commercial channels to "make or create a market for both the purchase and sale of securities," the SEC said.

Thus, it was said, the new rules extend to "one who engages solely in selling or solely in buying, while under the former rules registration was required only if a broker or dealer was engaged in making a market for both the purchase and sale of securities."

The President-Sailor.

The President is on a summer vacation on a sailing yacht. He has gone to what might be called his I See Sea Camp. He is all alone, except for a destroyer, the yacht Potomac and a schooner full of cameramen and news correspondents.

* * * *

This carries out the American tradition that when a President goes away for rest, quiet and seclusion he mustn't get any.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt is a real sailorman. He grew up on the water. And the Republicans are sorry he came ashore.

* * * *

* * * *

His vessel this summer is the yacht Sewanna. She is just a few feet too short to land a skipper in the class of an economic Royalist, but is hardly what the Forgotten Man would use when he felt the need of some fresh salt air.

* * * *

The President loves sailing. It probably accounts for his inclination to leave port in a whopping breeze and trust entirely to luck about getting back.

* * * *

One of the chief blessings of the cruise is that it will take him away from those Republican cartoons, cut him off from further denunciations by Father Coughlin and take him out of the steel crisis, unless, of course, the labor organizations develop sea units.

* * * *

They say that as a sailor the President sticks close to facts and figures. Accuracy and hard facts then get his full recognition, and he never tries to reach port by subtracting his compass course from his last barometric reading, adding $500,000,000, multiplying it all by his sail area and putting it up to the taxpayers to get him back to port.

* * * *

For publicity a yacht beats a Colorado fishing trip all hollow, but it is understood Alf Landon knows his capabilities and will not leap into a middy blouse, grab a yawl named Susanna and try to fight Franklin in his own element.

* * * *

The President is entitled to a rest and everybody hopes he gets it, but with that accompanying flotilla it seems a good deal like going for a quiet walk in the woods and discovering you are accompanied by a motorcycle escort, delegates from the Press Clubs of North America and 76 cameramen.

140 New Benches Placed in Parks

It will require record-breaking patronage, from now on, to make it necessary to hang out the "Standing Room Only" sign in Lafayette and Franklin parks.

Each of the two squares, most popular ones in the downtown area, now has 140 new benches. Prior to the PWA rehabilitation program administered by the Office of National Capital Parks, there were only 70 benches in each park.

Sturdily constructed of steel and white oak and painted a light brown, 550 of the new style benches are being distributed throughout the park system.

Group for Aid To Depositors In U. S. Formed

Lawrence Announces Bank Group Offices Will Be in Portsmouth.

By the Associated Press.

Portsmouth, Va., July 15.—Upon his return from Washington this morning, Frank D. Lawrence, vice president of the American National Bank, confirmed announcement of the American Bank Depositors Association, which will be national in scope, with the central office on the second floor of the American National Bank Building in this city.

Mr. Lawrence will act as general chairman, and other members of the executive committee are William Jennngs, Bryan, jr., of Los Angeles, Calif.; Thomas B. Love, of Dallas, Tex.; Miss Florence Hale, of New York City; Samuel Torgerson, of Grand Forks, N. Dak., and Arthur B. Koontz, of Charleston, W. Va.

In speaking of the new organization, Chairman Lawrence said:

Support Legislation.

"The American Bank Depositors Association has been formed to suggest and support legislation for promoting confidence on the part of bank depositors and the public in our banks, to protect the interests of bank depositors, and at he same time to protect buiness and society from the serious economic losses resulting rom bank failures.

"Since the now famous Glass-Steagall bill became law, giving the people deposit insurance, effective protection has been provided against losses resulting from bank failures, and there has been an unprecedented increase in deposits in all banks thruoghout the country. Notwithstanding this indisputable record, there are prominent bankers and others who do not approve this legislation, which, obviously and for the first time in the nation's history, has made American banks safe for their depositors.

To Protest Repeal.

"Not infrequently we are told that it is an 'unsound' policy and that it is 'un-American' for the Government of the United States to make all banks safe depositories for the money of the people. Our organization expects to meet this issue in the open forum of public opinion, by voicing a protest on behalf of bank depositors against any movement directed toward the repeal or emasculation of this law. We feel that candidates for high public office should let the public know how they stand on this important question and one of our objectives is to see to it that the public is well informed."

Unpublished Poem

By William Lyon Phelps.

For A. E. Housman.

The death of the great English poet Alfred E. Housman, which occurred on the first of last May, has called out many critical essays and articles about his life and work.

It is probable that 2,000 years from now people will still be reading the few poems that he chose to print. In spite of their pessimism and melancholy and austere economy of phrase, they have in them the eternal beauty of the English countryside. Beauty and Death are the themes.

* * * *

I have seen some imitations of his work, but I admire so much the following memorial poem sent to me in manuscript that I am glad the author has given me permission to print it, so that I may share my pleasure with my readers. The author is Mrs. Bernice Brown Bettman of Hartford, Conn., and she writes:

"In reading your daily talk the other day about A. E. Housman I was reminded again of my own personal debt to him. I have always thought that anyone who reads Housman will never be quite the same again, and I have tried to put into words something of that appreciation:

For A. E. Housman.

In Shropshire lanes the cherries bloom;
But fourscore years are passing on,
And one who walked the woodland ways
Has gone.

"There will be time enough for sleep,"
Oh, hear the drums of morning play;
But one who will not follow them
Today.

When you were one and twenty, lad,
The heart out of your breast would leap;
And now it only says—be still,
And sleep.

Now to the wind's twelve quarters
You take your endless way,
No more to be by Wenlock town
In May.

Another night, another day,
This tongue that talks, these lungs that shout;
The fire that burned within the breast
Gone out.

Another night, another day,
You played for us the immortal part;
How shall the west wind take away
Your heart?

But we shall bring you poplars
And cherry blossoms blown,
And thoughts that will not let you lie Alone.

Turn safe to dreams, to rest, to sleep,
We all must go and, friends to sever;
But there is one who cannot die
Forever.

Langworthy Assails New Deal, Calls Loose Spending a Menace

Tells Public Affairs Institute Roosevelt's Re-election Will Endanger Nation's Finances; Permanent Progress Held Lacking.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 15.—Herman Langworthy, chairman of the platform committee of the recent Republican national convention, said tonight the question of "whether we are to continue our American system of Government" and "whether we are to have an economical and sound administration of Government finances" constituted the two great issues of the 1936 Presidential campaign.

Langworthy, a Kansas City attorney, asked the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs if the Nation was "to turn headlong into a change in our form of Government, following unknown paths or paths which history has demonstrated can lead to no other results than the destruction of real American liberty."

The financial issue, he said, resolves itself into one of sound administration versus "wasteful, extravagant and political spending that is certain to lead to national financial disaster."

Ickes on Schedule.

He spoke at the close of a day that brought politics to the forefront of the institute discussions, which will be brought to a climax Friday night when Harold Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, and Hiram Bingham, former Senator from Connecticut, speak from the same platform on "Representative Government versus Dictatorship."

Langworthy also took the platform this morning in a discussion of "The Political Scene for 1936," in which he was joined by Mrs. George Wyeth, of New York, representing the Woman's National Republican Club.

Alexander Vincent Dye, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, intervened tonight with an address on "Government and Business."

Democrats will have their inning tomorrow when John Dickinson, assistant attorney general, and Mrs. Thomas McAllister, junior national committeewoman from Michigan, take the speakers' stand before the political round table.

As a prelude to the Ickes-Bingham addresses Friday night, Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, and Earl Browder, the Communist nominee, will speak. The third party movement will be discussed Saturday morning.

Says Confidence Misplaced.

Declaring that the early confidence in the Roosevelt Administration "was misplaced," Langworthy declared tonight that "within the past three years we have witnessed a steady departure from traditional American principles."

"We have witnessed," he said, "a reckless disregard of common-sense doctrines in the expenditure of national funds, with the result that our public debt has increased, and is still increasing at a prodigious rate.

"Even under the best of circumstances these developments would be a matter of grave concern. In the present case this is especially true. This is because it is evident there has been no lasting progress toward the solution of the economic and social problems of our Nation as a result of this new philosophy of government, or as a result of the wasteful and extravagant spending of Government funds which has taken place.

"It is small wonder, therefore, that a growing alarm which has arisen as the result of these developments is confined to no section of our country or group of our people, but extends into the homes and into the hearts of our citizens in all walks of life."

Contrasts Two Platforms.

Contrasting the two platforms adopted at the 1936 conventions of the two major parties, He said "the one proposes to maintain American traditions," the other "proposes to continue a record which the Supreme Court has found inconsistent at almost every point with our traditions and with the constitutional provisions governing the handling of our social and economic problems."

He recalled "repeated pledges since 1933 by the Chief Executive" that the budget would be balanced and declared that the volume of unemployment was approximately as great today as before the "huge spending program" was started.

The Republican system, he said, is a pledge to eliminate the spoils system and to provide the efficiency that can come "only from having a real merit system."

The issue, Langworthy continued, is not whether it is the obligation of government to deal with social and economic problems, but the manner in which it is met. In time of stress, he added, it is relatively easy for an Administration to obtain support for plans "that otherwise would be quite unacceptable to the people."

Sees Regulation Unnecessary.

Siegfreid F. Hartman, New York corporation attorney, speaking before the roundtable on "business and government," declared that Federal regulation of utilities was unnecessary because States were giving such protection and had not "called for Federal help."

Basil Manley, vice chairman of the Federal Power Commission, presenting the other side of the case, declared that money invested in public utilities was not being adversely affected by the policies initiated by the Administration.

Hartman argued that utility regulation was a State and not a Federal function, and that Federal supervision meant "conflict of authority and intolerable chaos."

He denounced Federal rate-making, and declared that it was attempted by "the sham and pretense that the Government in its hydroelectric business and in its interference in the internal affairs of the utility companies is not primarily intending to regulate rates but is really engaged in regulating navigation, controlling floods and running its postoffice system."

Manley asked if public utilities were not in their soundest and stablist position today when securities were subject to regulation and control, when Federal-State holding company regulations have been established, when mergers and consolidations must meet with official approval, and when rates were reduced to levels that promoted increasing use by all classes of consumers.

He said provision was made for the States to retain all their recognized and traditional powers.

Hughes Is Freed In Fatal Accident

Los Angeles, July 15 (AP).—Howard Hughes, film producer and holder of the world's land plane speed record, was not to blame for the accident in which his automobile killed a man at a street corner last Saturday night, a coroner's jury decided today.

The jury found that death of the victim, Gabe S. Meyer, 60, was an unavoidable accident.

For the first time, Hughes admitted reluctantly that the young woman riding with him when Meyer was killed was Nancy Belle Bayly, Pasadena society girl. She was a witness at today's inquest.

Both Hughes and Miss Bayly, who became 21 Saturday, laid the principal blame for Meyer's death on the unidentified driver of another automobile which they said whizzed past the Hughes car at a safety zone "so close he almost scratched my fender," Hughes testified.

Democrats Will Hear Talk by Sen. Radcliffe

Senator George L. Radcliffe, of Maryland, will speak before an open Democratic meeting Monday at 8 p. m. at the Washington Hotel under auspices of the Democratic Women's National Council. Mrs. Arthur D. Condon, president of the council, will preside.

Class Work Study Urged on Parents

Parents of school children should know what their children are studying, what sort of persons their children are, what the facilities of their school are and what system of marking is used.

This was the decision of a group of parents and teachers who are attending the annual Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, in session at the University of Maryland. Dean W. S. Small, of the college of education, led the discussion on the subject.

Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of schools, commended the attendants on the work they have done. Others who spoke were Mrs. Homer Hart, Mrs. Ruth Garber Ehlers and Mrs. Milton Moore.

British Navy Adequate, Churchill Says in Speech

London, July 15 (AP).—Winston Churchill, who as first Lord of the admiralty set the British fleet in motion in 1914, told a crowd at Epping tonight:

"I wish to make it quite clear that the Royal Navy is adequate at the present time for any demand that may be made upon it.

"It is incomparably stronger than any combination of navies which could conceivably be formed among the States of Europe."

At the same time, it was learned the government had purchased a plant to start the manufacture of gas masks for civilians, possibly within a month.

Criminal Cases In D. C. Court Number 1,620

Conliff Reports 303 Were Pending June 30 in U. S. Tribunal of Capital.

In his annual report to the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, John J. Conliff, chief clerk, yesterday showed that 1,620 criminal cases had been commenced during the year with only 303 cases pending as of June 30, 1936, in the newly named United States Court for the District.

The report showed that on June 20, 1935, there were pending 278 cases; that 1,645 cases were commenced during the fiscal year; that 1,620 cases were disposed of during the fiscal year, and that the number of cases actually triable during the year, which were continued, totaled only 72.

The report disclosed that the number of triable cases was augmented by the number of fugitives who had not been apprehended despite the fact that indictments had been returned against them.

The break-down of the calendar shows: 278 criminal cases pending June 30, 1935; 1,645 cases commenced during the fiscal year; 1,620 cases terminated during that period; 200 verdicts of guilty; 106 acquittals; 1,040 pleas of guilty; 10 dismissals on motion, and that 264 were dropped through "nolle prosses."

This total number of criminal cases thus pending as of June 30, 1936, were 303, of which 72 were actually triable, and of which 180 were not triable because the defendants were fugitives; while 51 were not triable because of the insanity of the defendants or for other reasons.

Townsendites To Hear Priest At Rally Today

Coughlin Decides to Speak as Split Over 3d Party Issue Widens.

them come from the Pacific Coast—and they are decidedly serious about what they are doing. There is almost a religious fervor in their conversation.

New Deal Excoriated.

"The New Deal is a deliberate and devilish attempt to wreck American principles of government," the tall, thin messiah of the movement told the audience. Gerald K. Smith, former Huey Long satellite, who has crossed the share-the-wealth movement with the Townsend campaign, backed him up:

"I'm a good Democrat, but I refuse to nurse out of the Farley bottle and eat cake that has been baked in Moscow."

He shouted the words in the same tone that has brought many a convert down the sawdust trail in many a Southern camp meeting.

Townsend's assault upon the New Deal and the "immense national debt" overshadowed a casually spoken sentence in which he prophesied a constitutional amendment as the road by which the objective of his organization could be reached.

"Why should I pussyfoot any longer?" he shouted. "It is time to call a spade a spade.

"The national debt is now $36,000,000,000, or $3,000 for every quarter section of land in the United States. The New Deal is wrecking the American principle of Government and the burden it is imposing must be carried by your children and mine."

Townsend warned that his organization "will not countenance any attack upon the United States Supreme Court."

His speech was brief and much of it was spoken in such undertones that many in three-quarters filled auditorium failed to hear him. It was even harder to hear than were speeches in the same auditorium during the Republican convention.

Smith preceded Townsend. He was considerably more violent and his language was not altogether that of a church meeting.

"I'm a good Democrat," he shouted, "and because I refuse to drink this Tammany milk, don't say I am not a good Democrat. If that is the Democratic Party, to hell with the Democratic Party.

"The ghost of Huey Long is haunting James A. Farley. Dr. Townsend has assured me that he will stand with me and others in a continued, relentless attack on the Roosevelt-Farley machine."

Most of the speech was a tirade against what he called "this communistic dictatorship that has been set up in the guise of democracy." He declared that there were "not less than 1,000 planted delegates" in the convention representing Farley. Later he told newspapermen that 500 guards had been posted about the hall to prevent disturbances by these "plants."

He wound up by charging that "Huey Long was killed by the Farley machine."

Gilmour Young, who succeeded Robert E. Clements as secretary of the Old Age Revolving Pensions, Ltd., when Clements broke with Townsend, said that the leaders planned to increase the membership to 5,000,000 by November. He said there now were 8,000 Townsend clubs in the country and predicted 16,000 by next year.

"Dr. Townsend was not allowed to consult his attorney," Smith said. "He was not permitted to subpena a witness in his own behalf. He would attempt to rise and they would say: 'Sit down.' He would attempt to speak and they would say 'Shut up.'

"This inquisition was set up, promoted and kept going by the Bell-Farley-Roosevent machine."

Baxter G. Rankine, national treasurer, reported the organization had collected $603,745.30 to the end of June. Disbursements, he said, totaled $625,245.62. The balance on hand, June 30, 1936, was $29,856.47. Rankine said that the organization had a surplus of $51,356.79 October 1, 1935.

Frank Arbuckle, of Los Angeles, was named permanent chairman by acclamation after three other candidates selected by the nominating committee withdrew.

They were Sheridan Downey, Dr. Townsend's personal counsel; Dr. Clinton Wunder, of New York, and Representative Smith, the temporary chairman.

Text of Dr. Francis E. Townsend's Address at Convention

In this great gathering are accredited representatives of many groups of unhappy and dissatisfied voters, all of whom are determined that this crazy orgy of spending, this debt-loading of ourselves and our children shall cease.

From the South come the followers of the lamented Huey Long, that gentleman who drove feudalism and intrenched greed from the State of Louisiana; from the Northeastern section come the determined fighters of the Union for Social Justice to proffer us their help; from the Northwest, the great bread basket of the country, come the sturdy pioneer men and women upon whom this country will always depend for the enforcement of the national rules for justice and security.

All these have volunteered to join with the millions of Townsendites in a universal demand that peonage shall never find foothold in our form of government; that the injustice of maintaining a great mass of our citizenship in chronic pauperism shall cease; and that justice, full and complete, shall be accorded all those who have devoted a lifetime of service in any capacity to the country's upbuilding.

Extends Welcome.

To you who have come to us with outstretched hands of helpfulness and co-operation I extend for myself and my fellow workers a welcome that is more than of the lips. Our welcome comes from full hearts and grateful souls. We recognize that you too are driving toward the same goal as ourselves, toward a stabilized condition of justice and security for all our citizens regardless of age, color, sex or creed.

We are all determined that the insidious and poisonous propoganda against our established form of government must end. We all want it definitely understood by the world that we shall tolerate no attack upon our Supreme Court, that bulwark of our liberties; we are in accord as we demand that freedom of speech and action within the law shall not be abridged.

Coming together as we do, my friends, in this spirit of fraternity, this identical determination to save our country from those who would wreck it for selfish or silly reasons; determined as we all are to inaugurate a new social era in conformity with our newly acquired wealth-producing ability, wherein all may enjoy the good things of life in abundance, it behooves us to think well in oredr that intolerance may not divide us.

In different sections of the country we have had different political training and tradition. In religion we have difference in creed, racially we have not yet been able to overcome the prejudice of color and nationality. But here, in this hour of common need I believe the peril we face in common will unite us in an unbreakable phalanx of militant activity that can not be gainsaid. I believe that we shall agree upon a program of political action that will be more than a political platform, more than a list of specious promises such as have disgraced the old political parties for generations.

Ours must be a plan of immediate action, a definitely laid-out course of action that will not compromise the principles of any one of our groups, but that can and will embody in a national demand a call for a constitutional amendment that will insure the abolition of poverty from our land, insure a civil service award to our aged citizens sufficient for maintaining them in a $200-a-month standard of living and thereby so enhance the production of wealth that all who wish to work and serve society may find opportunity to do so.

No thoughtful person can avoid the conclusion that this Administration has engaged upon a deliberately planned attempt to introduce a new from of government in America that is to be the direct antithesis of democracy; a form of government that must of necessity be arranged and executed by an all-powerful, centralized autocracy.

I am happy to report to the convention that the people of all sections, East, West, North and South are becoming thoroughly aroused by the immediacy of the danger to a degree that promises millitant and aggressive action to stop these vicious attacks upon our liberties and our long established and revered institutions.

Why should we pussyfoot, why should we hedge, why should we not call a spade a spade. This Administration, instead of profiting by the mistakes of the preceding one has gone on blindly intensifying those same mistakes and adding to them an infinite variety of new ones.

Thirty-six billions of national debt is the record of these blundering, bungling mistakes. What does $36,000,000,000 mean to you? I wonder if any one can possibly comprehend what a burden $36,000,000,000 of debt means to this and future generations.

There are in the continental United States a little over 3,000,000 square miles of territory. Get the exact figures from your 1935 almanac. Divide 36,000,000,000 by the number of square miles and you will find that every quarter section of 160 acres, including mountain, desert and swamp land is carrying a government debt of $3,027. We know too that not more than one-fourth of the area of these United States is arable, tillable land.

That means that for every productive 160 acres of land in our country there must be carried a national debt of more than $13,000. This debt, mind you, is laid on top of all other debts, State county, municipal and private.

All these financial burdens must be assumed and carried by your children and mine. They are as inevitably chained to this burden as if they had come of slave parentage for the past 100 generations. For the thinking individual it can mean but one thing. Everlasting peonage for our children and our children's children, or repudiation.

The time will shortly come when we shall have to begin running the printing presses steadily, turning out fiat money to meet our obligations, or we shall have to declare the debts unpayable and repudiate them all. That means in essence that the Government says to its citizens: "A debt is not an obligation. It is merely a scrap of paper. Any time you find it convenient, it is just and proper to declare your debt null and void."

Predicts Chaos.

In that day what becomes of business honor and business integrity upon which we depend for the conduct of all business? The world, the orderly world which has been built through the travail and wearisome labors of thousands of generations, will come to an end and chaos will supervene.

All the haphazard, silly conceived legislation that has been indulged in by this Administration evinces one of two things, either profound ignorance and lack of comprehension of the basic causes underlying our economic national disaster, or a deliberate, Machiavelian, planned attempt to discredit and totally wreck the American principle of government. I am firmly convinced that deliberate and devilish planning has prompted every move of this Administration since its inception as a Government.

What other conclusion can be arrived at when we consider that more than two years ago agents of the Government occupying high places in the official family of President Roosevelt formed themselves into corporations under the liberal laws of Delaware which gave them power to use Government funds to acquire and operate various properties in perpetuity, to buy and control, to sell and lease, to engage in competition with private business, and all under legalized, United States Government control.

Every act of the Government since then has been predicated upon the heedless advice of the President when he said: "Try something, if it works, try it some more. If it does not work, try something else." If that is not the advice of a totally incompetent or a reckless fatalist who is incapable of thoughtful planning on a national scale, what is it? I believe that that advice to his official family was deliberate recklessness intended to augment the disaster that has befallen us.

Note the wild extravagance of public expenditures that has been indulged in; the dry ditch dug half way across Florida, the wasteful attempt to harness the tidal power of Passamaquoddy to generate electric power that would have no market, all now abandoned and the millions so spent wasted. A similar project in northeastern Washington where $65,000,000 are to be spent for the generation of a great electric power plant that when completed will be so far from the populous center that there can be no market for the power generated.

All this reckless extravagance with the public money can mean but one thing in my estimation, namely, a purposeful desire to so obligate the Government in bonded indebtedness as to make payment through taxation impossible and foreclosure upon the wealth of the United States inevitable.

Note the reckless disregard for the constitutionality of the projects engaged in by this Administration, the NRA, the AAA and similar activities in which millions of the people's money has been lost in useless non-productive enterprises; note the hue and cry against the Supreme Court prompted by the President himself when he made the sneering allusion to that court as belonging to the "horse and buggy days."

Consider the assinine folly of a great and rich nation assuming that it must borrow before any national undertaking can be engaged in. No modern nation should be required to borrow a single cent for the purpose of carrying on the functions of Government.

"Just Taxation" Needed.

A just and fair system of taxation should be devised by the thoughtful men and women of each Nation that will impose upon all citizens the necessity of bearing their share of the cost of government. All people, every soul in the land enjoys the functions of civilized government, therefore let everybody be compelled to pay, in proportion to his ability, his and her share of the costs of government.

Such a system is available. It can be easily set in operation. The machinery is already in existence. In essence the system we demand is this: Tax everybody on the amount of money that he spends. We are all spenders. We must buy or die. The more we have to spend, the more we will spend. Hence, those who spend most will pay the most in taxes for the maintenance of government.

Let us adopt a uniform rate applicable to everyone that we must all pay and have the tax collected from all the sellers in the Nation, who in turn will collect from the buyers in the price of the goods sold. Catch the transaction when it is consummated, when the deal is made. Let the Government collect then and there. Make every financial transaction in the form of a sale illegal that does not show evidence of having paid its contribution to the National Treasury.

During the slow and tedious climb of humanity through the ages to our present status of civilization we have gone blindly and haphazardly forward, at times progressing rapidly for a generation, then by reason of some unfortuitous circumstance, slipping backward into the old familiar dark ages for a longer or shorter period—surging forward, slipping backward, gaining knowledge in one generation, losing it again in the next, but gradually retaining some scrap of useful knowledge from each forward step with the resultant attainment summed up in our present day American standard of living as the ultimate of human progress. At least we Americans like to believe this. Other nations may dispute our claim to this outpost of advancement, but be that as it may, we are at least near the top.

"Results Are Meager."

Assume that we are at the top, yet in the light of our scientific survey of progress, how pitifully meager are the net results of which we boast. Wealth beyond all dreams of possibility has within the last few years become available to humanity; scientific knowledge has now become the common property of a great portion of the human family; instantaneous communication is available to almost all parts of the world; yet, despite all these tremendous advances we are convinced that only a start has been made along the road of advancement.

Strange indeed it is that despite the marvelous strides attained along producive and scientific lines there has been such laggard activity in the sociological world. We have learned how to create and possess, wealth undreamed of may be had by the individual who owns the means of production, yet in the lower strata of society want and destitution are as rampant, ignorance as dense, criminality as attractive as in any other period of the world's history.

It is a curious phenomenon of social progress that we are unable to advance toward a world of equity and social security except by fits and starts, that we have never been able to make progress in all phases of civilization simultaneously. We inch along, first in one direction then in another, seizing and protecting an idea along the lines of astronomic research perhaps, or of sanitation or transportation, but no concerted effort has ever been made to advance along the entire front of human progress.

"Eve of World Move."

My friends, there is no doubt in my mind that we are on the eve of a great world surge forward toward an ideal civilization. This advance will come rapidly or slowly as you and I do our duty or neglect to do it. All signs point to the front, all humanity beckons us forward, the universal dread and fear of world war bids us hasten in our endeavor to secure for ourselves and our children the fruition of the ages-long desire for universal brotherhood founded upon justice and security for all.

I believe with all my heart that this great venture upon which we are launched is a contagion of idealism that will inevitably spread to all the world and that nothing can stop it. The United States of America will set the pace and show the way for the rest of the world to utilize the marvelous facilities of wealth production now attained by all the great nations so that all classes of society may benefit equally to the end that poverty, with its attendant evils of ignorance and disease and crime, may be abolished from the earth.

Lemke Is Loser In Court Battle On Farm Debts

Judge at Fargo Voids 10 Cases Despite Pleas by Representative.

By the Associated Press.

Fargo, N. Dak., July 15.—Representative William Lemke, Union Party candidate for President, failed today in an attempt to have the Federal Court sustain actions under which ten North Dakota farmers sought relief under farm mortgage moratorium legislation he helped frame.

Judge Andrew Miller, basing his ruling on the decision of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals holding the amended Frazier-Lemke act unconstitutional, granted motions for dismissal of the ten actions.

Lemke argued that the act does nothing more than Federal courts often do in regular bankruptcy proceedings.

"There is only one new thing that the Frazier-Lemke act does," Lemke, appearing for the defense, declared. "Under regular bankruptcy proceedings, it is within the discretion of the court to grant the mortgagor time in which to redeem his property and often this period runs as high as three years. The Frazier-Lemke bill merely makes this provision mandatory instead of discretionary.

Cites Procedure.

"Under provisions of the Frazier-Lemke act, property is under jurisdiction of the courts the same as in regular bankruptcy proceedings. Conciliators are in fact nothing more than receivers who will act under the jurisdiction of the court.

"If property involved is being dissipated or waster, or if the mortgagor fails to pay rents, it is within the power of the court to dismiss the action and order the property sold."

Lemke pointed to the difference of opinion among the courts regarding constitutionality of the act. The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, he said, has held the law valid and 12 District courts have upheld it, while two circuit courts and 10 District courts have held against it.

No Legality Rule.

At Lemke's request, Judge Miller added a provision to his decision, in which he pointed out he was not passing on the act's constitutionality, but that the cases in question be reinstated if the United States Supreme Court finds the act is valid.

Plaintiffs in the actions before the court today were the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, the Regional Agricultural Credit Corporation and the Intermediate Credit Corporation.

The farmers whose actions were dismissed had sought appointment of conciliators who would have made arrnagemnts to extend mortgages for the three-year period to allow opportunity for redemption of the property.

No More Damage After Today, Asserts Astronomer Who Forecast Heat Wave Months Ago on Basis of 'Wobblings' in Lunar Orbit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—An immediate end of the drought, with its crop ruin and threats of rising food prices, was forecast tonight by the man who predicted the hot, dry weather six months before it arrived.

There would be "no more damage from drought" after tomorrow, he asserted, although it might take the Nation 10 days to accept the fact. By July 26, he added, there would be so much rain that "everyone is going to see that the drought danger is ended."

The man is Selby Maxwell, astronomer-meteorologist, who said he read the good news in the wobblings of the moon.

Maxwell predicted the drought's end with the same air of confidence with which he warned of its coming around Christmas time in 1935.

At that time, he glanced at his long range forecasting charts—based on the distances the moon wobbles in its orbit—and predicted:

That January and February would have heavy snow, and that drought would develop during March, April and May and do its worst in June and July.

All that came to pass.

Tonight Maxwell looked at his charts again. They showed, he said, that the end of the drought began with last week-end's rains—the ones the Weather Bureau expected would break the hot wave. When the break failed, Maxwell said the cool wave did not dissipate as some weathermen believed, but had shot northward over the uninhabited wilds of Canada, and looped back today from the Hudson Bay region. His maps, made months before, outlined the loop clearly.

Tonight and tomorrow, Maxwell predicted a "considerable drop" in temperatures—perhaps 20 to 25 degrees—accompanied by rain from the Great Lakes to Alabama.

A hurricane on July 20—"it may be just a lot of water, but it may get nasty and rip things up"—would blow across Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas and bring rain and lower temperatures to the lower half of the corn belt, he declared.

General rains would follow, Maxwell went on, and the floods he forecast last Christmas for this fall would then come.

July wheat at Chicago shot up to $1.06¾ but then, under the pressure of heavy profit taking, reacted to a close of $1.04⅝. Net gain for the session for the three deliveries quoted was 2 to 2¾ cents. Corn advanced 2½ to 3⅛ cents. Kansas City July wheat closed only ⅜ cent below the permissible top of $1.05¾, which was reached about midsession. Minneapolis December advanced 4⅞ at one stage but closed 2 cents lower.

Wyoming Stock Low.

At Cheyenne, Wyo., Russell T. Thorpe, secretary of the Wyoming Cattle Breeders Association, estimated drought has caused a shortage of 300,000 cows in Wyoming. "The situation is more serious than most people believe," he told the Associated Press.

WPA and State officials of the Dakotas conferred at Bismarck yesterday to speed the relief program. Howard O. Hunter, assistant administrator, represented the WPA, while Gov. Walter Welford of North Dakota and Gov. Tom Berry of South Dakota participated in the conference, along with a dozen welfare and relief representatives.

Immediate progress on all water conservation projects was the chief feature of the new program, but Hunter declared:

"Human needs come first, and we will leave nothing undone to clear the way for this relief within the next 24 hours. There is no human experience more agonizing than to be without water. We expect to derive long-range as well as emergency benefits from this program which will reduce the drought hazards in this area."

Kansas Crops Good.

Topeka, Kans., July 15 (AP).—Despite the continued dry, hot weather, Kansas already has harvested agricultural crops estimated today by J. C. Mohler, secretary of the State board of agriculture, as worth $161,091,850.

The aggregate value of this season's crops is greater, the secretary said, than the total crop returns in any year since 1931.

But in sections where the cooling breezes failed to penetrate another day was chalked up in the record stays of the more-than-100-degree heat—the thirteenth consecutive 24-hour period when the sun held sway.

Quincy, in west-central Illinois, reported a 112-degree maximum early yesterday afternoon. Other "hot spots" included Indianapolis, Ind., 102.9; Clarendon, Tex., 110; Wellington, Kans., 111; Fall City, Nebr., 106; Kansas City, Mo., 102, and Ponca City, Okla., 108.

In Oklahoma, K. D. Blood, crop statistician for the Government, said the drought situation was approaching the severity of that of 1934.

But residents in grief-stricken Minnesota and Michigan, Wisconsin and parts of Illinois, which have suffered most heavily in loss of life from the heat wave, revelled in cooler weather.

Thus far, Minnesota led the parade of adehtde hitw oHTu T8 $I rade of the dead, with 707 dying from heat. Michigan, in second place, reported loss of 568 lives. The dead in Illinois totaled 436 and in Wisconsin, 443.

As a result of drought and heat, milk prices were advanced in at least two additional cities—Pittsburgh and Freeport, Ill.—yesterday.

The Associated Press asserted concern was beginning to be manifested as to the ultimate effect of the dry spell on prices in other food lines.

Late yesterday afternoon statistics on the dead arrived from Ohio and Missouri. The Buckeye State had 252 and Missouri, 232.

Streams throughout the Middle West, graphically illustrating the effects of the prolonged heat, approached new low stages at numerous points.

The Ohio River, a menace to life and property only a few months ago because of flood, trickled idly along at one-seventieth of its spring crest.

Its flow, the Associated Press said last night, was being estimated at 8,200 cubic feet, as compared to 568,500 recorded March 26.

Engineers on the Mississippi River at Rock Island redoubled their efforts to maintain a 6-foot channel, with the stage there only 1.2 feet above the all-time low water mark established during the 1934 drought.

Arbor Scene Of Marriage At Twin Oaks

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Twin Oaks, the home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell, was the scene of the marriage last night of her granddaughter, Miss Helene Fortescue, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Granville Fortescue, to Mr. Julian Louis Reynolds, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Reynolds of New York.

Japanese lanterns lighted the garden where the ceremony was performed beneath the rose arbor. Before the hour of the wedding guests assembled on the lawn in front of the house where the two great oaks stand, which give the estate its name. Flood lights from the upper balcony of the veranda provided illumination, bringing in relief the heavy, twisted trunk of the wisteria vine which arches above the steps. The table with the bride's cake in the center, and lighted by four tall white tapers, was arranged on the lawn below, and there was music by a small orchestra.

At 9 o'clock the guests went to the garden at the side of the house, down a flagged path between boxwood hedges, past a small pool which reflected the light of the colored lanterns, and at the end of the path had full view of the arbor beneath which an improvised altar had been placed. The Rev. Dr. Albert Evans, of the Church of the Covenant, was there awaiting the bridal couple when the guests assembled, the red scholastic hood on his vestments adding color to the picture. The bridal party came from the opposite side of the garden, and seemed to appear out of the darkness.

The bride wore a white net gown over satin, simply made, with a long train appliqued with white satin calla lilies, and carried a bouquet of Madonna lilies. Her sister, Miss Thalia Bell, the former Mrs. Thalia Massie, was her only attendant. Her gown was of a violet chiffon and she carried a bouquet of talisman roses tied with a salmon-colored satin ribbon. Mr. Richard S. Reynolds, jr., was best man for his brother.

The orchestra played softly during the ceremony, playing "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" and "I Love You Truly."

The grandmother of the bride wore a flowing chiffon gown of pale green with soft draperies over the arm and a fuchia flower at the V-neck, which was in becoming contrast to her white hair. The bride's mother wore a gown of black with bands of silver trimming the neckline and the bridegroom's mother was in white chiffon.

The wedding of the bride's parents took place in the same setting in which she was married and some among the guests at the ceremony last night had been present when her mother, the former Miss Grace Bell, became the bride of Col. Fortesque.

The bride made her debut here in 1933. She lived abroad with her parents for a number of years and was educated in Belgium and at the National Cathedral School. She is a skilled equestrienne and tennis player and has been in motion pictures and in the theater.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. S. Reynolds, vice president of the Reynolds Tobacco Co. He is connected with the Reynolds Metal Co. in New York.

Women Plan Vote Drives This Summer

Rep. Rogers, Mrs. O'Day to Be Busy; Mrs. Norton to Give Talks.

By Dudley Harmon.

It takes more than a heat wave to interfere with the campaigning activities of Senators and Representatives who, during this election summer, are taking the stump in their own behalf or in their party's cause in great numbers.

Among the wives of members of Congress who are campaigning for the Republican Party this summer is Mrs. Chester Bolton, wife of Representative Bolton. One of the most political-minded women in Washington, she has been active since the Republican Convention in women's campaign affairs in Lyndhurst, Ohio, where she and Representative Bolton make their home.

Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, of Nevada, who are still at their home on Foxhall road, will leave shortly for the West, where Senator Pittman plans to tour the State making speeches for President Roosevelt.

Seeks Sixth Term.

Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, the "Flying Congresswoman," who has traveled so often in airplane that she is nervous riding in automobiles, will make frequent flights in her home State this summer. Re-elected every term since the death of her husband, Representative John Jacob Rogers, Mrs. Rogers is going to run again for the sixth time.

It may interest Mrs. Rogers, one of the pioneer women to take to the air, to learn that a survey made recently by Central Airlines has revealed that 40 per cent more women passengers are being carried by plane today than a year ago. Also, according to the same survey, women making their first trip appear more composed than some men, and their luggage comes within the 35-pound free baggage allowance more often than does that of the average man.

Another Congresswoman campaigning in her own behalf is Mrs. Caroline O'Day, who expects to be accompanied on her tour of New York State by Miss Marian Dickerman, close friend of Mrs. Roosevelt and head of Todhunter School, New York City. Mrs. O'Day recently returned to her home in Rye from Hyde Park, where she was the week-end guest of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Norton to Stump.

As soon as Mrs. Mary Norton returns to her New Jersey home from a cruise to Denmark, Norway and Sweden, she, too, will stump for President Roosevelt. Senator Hattie C. Caraway, although not campaigning this year, is planning to make several speeches in Arkansas, her home State, which is celebrating its centennial this summer.

Another woman recently to enter the political field is Mrs. Louis McHenry Howe, widow of the former secretary to the President. Mrs. Howe has been appointed acting postmaster in Fall River, Mass. It was announced at Postmaster General Farley's office that the appointment would be made permanent after civil service examinations are held.

Mrs. Howe remained at her home in Fall River during most of the time her husband was confidential adviser to the President and took no active part in public life.

Society Looks to Horse Show At Meadowbrook on Saturday

Ten 1,000-Watt Lights Will Illuminate Grounds for Night Events; Entries Expected From Washington, Fort Myer and Warrenton.

Ten 1,000-watt lights will illuminate the Meadowbrook Show Grounds, where society people will gather Saturday night for the first out-of-door horse show ever held in Washington or the vicinity, and one of the first to be held anywhere with so large a jumping arena.

The show, sponsored by the Riding and Hunt Club, with Maj. Frank L. Whittaker in charge, was postponed from last Saturday because of the heat and was to have taken place this Saturday afternoon instead. Maj. Whittaker, who has been considering the idea of a night show for some time, decided now was the time to have it. It is third in a series of four post-entry events and is expected to draw entries from Washington, Fort Myer and Warrenton.

The five hunter and five jumper classes scheduled for the day-time show, will all be included, and the great lights will make the jumping arena as bright as day. Those who desire to try their horses with the lights will be permitted to do so tonight and tomorrow night.

The horses should perform as well if not better than in the daylight, says Maj. Whittaker, because they jump with more care at night. The evening will also have an advantage for the spectators who will be able to enjoy the show in comfort instead of in the heat of a midday sun he pointed out.

Mrs. James Guitar, who with Col. T. J. Johnston, chief of the Remount Service, U. S. A., will judge the show, comes from Warrenton and promises several entries from there.

Among those who will enter from Washington will be Mr. Fenton Fadely, M. F. H. of the Riding and Hunt Club, entering Lacquer Lady; Miss Margaret Cotter, who is expected to enter Roxie; Miss Betty Couzens, with Repulsion and Bean Beetle; Miss Margaret Hill, her mother's horse, Questionnaire, and Miss Louise Myer, another in this group of young horsewomen, who is expected to ride her horse.

In addition to many of the outstanding local horses, the Fort Myer Horse Show Team will bring its string of well-known hunters and jumpers.

Such outstanding performers as Clipped Wings, Hats Off, Eyes Delight, Brown Woods and Red Cloud will make a strong bid for top honors.

The events will start at 7:30.

Couple Visits Relative on Honeymoon

Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Davis See Bride's Uncle in Capital.

She Is the Former Ruby Hortense Rosser, of Richmond.

Mr. and Mrs. Marlyn Leslie Davis, who were married yesterday morning in Richmond, Va., spent a few hours at the home of the bride's uncle, Dr. George Tully Vaughan, here in the afternoon before leaving by boat for a southern wedding trip.

The bride is the former Miss Ruby Hortense Rosser, daughter of Mrs. James Hammer Burnley, of Richmond. Her marriage to Mr. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie E. Davis, of Chase City Va., took place at 11:30 at her mother's home, where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Wade H. Brayant, with only members of the immediate family present after their wedding trip the couple will reside in Richmond.

The bride has frequently visited here, both at the home of Dr. Vaughan, of whom she is a grandniece, and at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Lorenza S. Winslow. She also is a granddaughter of Mrs. Hortense Vaughan Burks, of Washington and Amherst, Va.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Stepmother of Insubordinate, Blasphemous 14-Year-Old Boy Asks What to Do?

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: About one year ago I wrote you concerning my marriage, then three months old, to a widower with three children. You gave me much comforting advice, but now I am faced with another problem. The middle son, 14 years of age, has for some reason unknown to me taken an attitude that he does not have to be corrected by me. During last May and June I had trouble with him and his elder brother, 15, cutting school, but I managed to take care of the problem with the help of the Juvenile Protective Association.

* * * *

The boys chase around with other boys who really mean no good, which I believe is partly responsible for their troublesome conduct at home. I have been just as good to them as if they were my very own, but they continue to make unbecoming remarks about everything that is suggested to them by me. They have as much privilege as any boy should have at their age.

* * * *

Now I have reached the place where I don't know what to do. I get very little help from their father, as he seems to be at a loss for words when it comes to administering correction. The 14-year-old is just as saucy as he can be, unlike a child in whatever he has to say, but acts as if he is of age; in fact, I have never heard of a child's saying the rotten things he says. Even that wouldn't kill me but when he takes the liberty of swearing and cursing me, I think it is too much.

* * * *

For punishment, his father deprives him of one or two evenings of play and tells him he must not behave as he does if he expects to live with him. This form of correction is entirely out of order, to my way of thinking, and because his father does not know how to handle the boy, I really blame the father and feel offended with him. As often as the father goes to work, so often does the son take advantage of his absence to tell me anything that comes into his mind. Now there is no one who can say I am mean to the children, for often I deprive myself in order to give to them, just trying to fill the place of a real mother, but since this child has cursed me, something in me has changed so that I cannot feel the same toward him.

* * * *

I love my husband dearly and will always stick by him, but what to do with the children who do not appreciate what I am doing for them along with kind treatment is quite beyond me. Please help me if you can, for I am at my wits' end. There is so much to this story that I hardly know how to tell you any of it in order that you may understand, but I sincerely hope you grasp what I am trying to tell you—in part, at least. Sincerely. WORRIED.

Mass Discipline Needed.

DEAR WORRIED: I believe any student of child behavior will agree with me that the most constructive thing to do here is to place the 14-year-old boy in a boys' camp for the summer. Then, in the fall, if he is still surly and disagreeable toward you, enroll him in a boys' school for the following year. This is a situation which must be met by the discipline of the crowd, rather than the too personal discipline of the individual.

* * * *

The boy needs work to do—work that he is interested in doing, and lots of it. He gets into trouble and blows off steam in ugly language because he has no more constructive way of expending his energies. The adolescent age is a very trying age for both child and natural parent, and you should not be too discouraged that you, who are not his blood mother, should find the boy unmanageable just now.

* * * *

Mrs. Margaret Cannon, NAtional 6000, the Franklin School, can give you a list of boys' schools. Miss Jeanette Steiden, SHepherd 1344, former counsellor at Eliot Junior High, may be able to give you some suggestions about boys' camps, and Dr. Paul Bartsch, of the National Museum, NAtional 1310, as a leader in Boy Scouts' work in the District, can tell you about the Boy Scouts' camps. Miss Mildred Territt, of the Juvenile Protective Association, NAtional 2314, can no doubt give you a list of possible country homes where your stepson might go for the summer, if he is interested in farming, farm life or agricultural pursuits. Or perhaps you have friends, relatives or even acquaintances living in the country who might be willing to board him for the summer and give him enough to do to keep him fully occupied during his waking hours.

* * * *

Sending the boy to a camp or boys' school is going to necessitate a substantial outlay of money, I have no doubt; but I believe it will be money well spent, for the boy's good, for your own and your husband's peace of mind, and for the good of the other children. If you must make painful sacrifices to do it, I believe the sacrifices will be well worth it. You simply can't go on as you are. I don't believe the boy can be managed by you or by his father, until some saving influence outside the home has worked its healing effect.

* * * *

In sending him away, don't take the attitude that you are "showing him," or that it is a punitive measure. Take the attitude, rather, that you want to make him happier, and that you are doing the thing you know will make him happier and a better boy. If he objects to going, firmly stand your ground and see that he does go, regardless of his objections.

M. H.

Your Talk Rates You

HOW THE telephone magnifies every defect in our talk! Bad speech sounds ten times trashier on the telephone than in a living room.

Suppose a girl gabbles off some dull tittle-tattle such as ". . . and so he asks Helen could he come around that night, and golly, she already had a date, and was she ever out on the end of a limb . . ."

"Golly" and "out on the end of a limb" may be amusing slang phrases when some men say them. But they shatter the picture of a girl's femininity, charm, delicacy.

Sloppy pronunciation, always painful, is simply bloodcurdling on the phone. "She's so athaletic that she's very soople"—instead of ath-LET-ic in three syllables, and SUP-ple to rhyme with "couple." Br-r-r!

Poor talk is a sure index of social rating. Anybody can buy a pretty dress and get a nice hair wave, to make a good showing. But it's all wasted if they talk like ill-bred nobodies.

Learn to talk well, and show yourself for the person you really are. You don't need years of college, just some new speech habits. Our 40-page booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION, will set you on the right track. Tips on good topics, tact, pitfalls in English, slips in pronunciation.

Send 15c for our booklet, IMPROVING YOUR CONVERSATION, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Uncle Sam's Step-Saving Kitchen for Housewives

Skirts Up 2 Inches, Smaller Waists Forecast for Fall

New York, July 15.—Shorter skirts—by at least 2 inches—were forecast today for women next fall

Other predictions at a semi-annual fashion clinic for store executives:

Waist lines will be smaller.
Shoulders will be broader.
Skirts will be fuller.
Clothing will be richer in tone, but not so brazenly bright.

There will be a "tremendous vogue" for casual clothes, versatile enough to be worn in the city and in the country, and to take part in all the travel increases.

Amos Parrish, who conducted the clinic he said was attended by executives from stores whose total annual volume exceeds more than $1,250,000,000, forecast a definite upward sales trend in all clothing and accessories.

Kitchen Guesswork Absent In Low-Cost Home Projects

By Hope Ridings Miller.

LUCKY is the housewife who has a kitchen planned by Charles E. Mayett, principal mechanical engineer of the Housing Division of the Public Works Administration.

There is no guesswork in his arrangement of stoves, sinks, cabinets and refrigerators in the kitchens he has worked out for the low-cost housing projects of the PWA. Making a survey of hundreds of kitchens throughout the country, consulting with Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the United States Bureau of Home Economics, and studying from every angle the placement of each piece of equipment, he has planned kitchens that would delight any homemaker.

Yesterday at his office in the housing division Mayett unfolded a series of blueprints that picture housing projects now being carried out in 35 cities throughout the United States. Some of these provide for buildings of 50 units; one—the Ten Eyck House, Brooklyn, includes 1,416 units.

"As a rule, the size of the kitchen depends on the size of the apartment," he said, "but in some cases it is governed by locality. In one State, for example, there is a law to the effect all kitchens must be 10 feet square. But that is larger than the average. We do, however, favor a room that is almost square, so that if necessary it will accommodate a table where the family can eat. In many of these low-cost housing projects, apartments do not have dining rooms or even dinettes."

Step-Saving Is Goal.

The average heights of women have been taken into consideration in planning heights of sinks and cabinets and shelves, he said.

"And, of course, we have arranged equipment so it would save steps as much as possible. We try to place the refrigerator close to the work table so it will be convenient. We have shelves over the workable and the sink nearby, so that by moving about very little the housewife can prepare a meal."

1. Stove is near the window, "unless there is some special reason to place it inside," he said.

2. Cabinets, either of metal or wood, are built to the ceiling, eliminating any dirt-catching space at the top.

Not Walled In.

4. As a rule, sinks are not walled in below "because that space, if not left open, generally becomes a dirty catch-all," said Mr. Mayett. "The only time we provide for it to be walled in is for a 'strip kitchen' (sometimes called a 'pullman kitchen') that is part of the living room.

5. In the "strip kitchen," the work table may be omitted to save space.

6. Shelves (with doors) are built in above the sink or work table (generally, above the latter).

7. Swinging doors from the other part of the apartment to the kitchen are provided, "but never glass ones," according to Mayett. "We don't consider the latter practicable."

8. In most kitchens, the stove, sink, work table and refrigerator are placed along one wall. But if the kitchen is less than 9 feet and 10 inches in length, the refrigerator may be placed along another wall.

9. A 1½-inch clearance space should be left as a minimum space between all pieces of equipment.

Boy Entitled To His Music If Interested

Need Not Be Talented to Make Lessons Worth While.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. BROWN would not let her son take music lessons. Her girls, yes, but for a boy they were an unnecessary and effeminate frill. In later years she often had cause to regret her decision, for the boy was a passionate music lover, and could through music have found a much-needed means of self-expression.

One does not need to be a genius or even very talented to make music lessons worth while. The old notion of learning pieces to play for people is fast dying out. Player pianos and phonographs have made amateur talent as a parlor accomplishment unnecessary. But the real music lover still needs to express himself in music for his own satisfaction, and no vicarious performance, however good, fills the bill.

Only the person who plays some instrument, however indifferently, can know the release which comes from playing. He does not play for others to hear, but to satisfy some inner need in himself. To deny this satisfaction to a boy any more than to a girl is short-sighted and unfair.

It is no more effeminate to play music than to listen to it. The greatest musicians in the world have always been men, and most of them were not weaklings.

In some respects it is more important to teach the rudiments of music to a boy than to a girl. It is still true that the life of the average man is more confining and monotonous than the life of the woman. He needs a place to escape to, a world where he can express the frustrated hopes and dreams and the longing for beauty which the circumstances of life have denied him.

Let the boy begin music when his sisters do, and if he shows the slightest interest in it, encourage him to go on.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

By Mignon.

(The Mignon who writes this column does not manufacture, sell or indorse any cosmetics.)

IF YOU WANT to feel as if you owned at least two downtown hotels in one of our biggest cities buy yourself a bottle of bath oil—the last word in elegance—and costing you about the price of a good pair of gloves.

This oil, of which you use only about three drops to a bath, scents an entire apartment with an indescribable perfume which was introduced only a few years ago. It is one of those fragrances which Frenchmen study over for years in order to get perfection. This time they didn't fail.

I don't like bath oil in bath water because, say what they will, the manufacturers cannot convince me oil and water mix. What I do like is to take a drop or two of the oil and rub it on the skin after a bath. This gives a lasting fragrance, and believe me, an elegant one. My advice is to use bath oil for a skin perfume entirely, but of course this is merely a matter of taste, and I suspect a great many people will disagree with me. Try it my way once and see if you don't think the idea is a grand one.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Good Care for Premature Babies.

As a rule, babies arrive approximately 280 days subsequent to the onset of pregnancy, but occasionally they do not. Sometimes causes over which we have no control will bring on labor, the baby making his advent any time between the seventh month and full term. When such an event occurs there is great scurrying about for the proper apparatus that will help preserve the tiny spark of life.

The chief consideration is that the youngster shall not lose heat. Before birth the baby is accustomed to a temperature of nearly 100 degrees Fahrenheit and this can be provided in a carefully constructed incubator without difficulty. On the other hand, incubators are not always at hand and a wicker basket may be used with certain warming devices.

There are many sources of heat, such as lighted electric bulbs, electric pads, hot water bottles, etc. An infant's temperature should not fall below 99 degrees Fahrenheit, when taken via the rectum. In managing a premature child great care must be exercised so that no heated object is allowed to come into contact with the skin. Wrapping the infant in cotton is important from the standpoint of maintaining temperature.

The atmosphere of the room must be somewhere between 80 and 90 degrees Fahrenheit. Furthermore, moisture must be adequate. If the air is dry a rapid loss of fluid takes place through evaporation from the infant's body.

No water bathing should be permitted, sterile cottonseed oil being substituted. Body folds should be powdered with a dusting powder, such as equal parts of bismuth subnitrate, calamine, Fuller's earth and zinc oxide. The gentlest handling is necessary.

Premature infants require as a minimum 50 calories per day per pound and many of them do better if this amount is increased by 50 or even 100 per cent. Fortunately, digestion rarely gives difficulty. Breast milk should be used if possible, and although but few of these infants can suck, mother's milk may be obtained by massaging the breast and feeding with a medicine dropper. Evaporated milk may be given.

And Call It Accident

By

Mrs. Belloc Loundes

Chapter 35.

Dimly, for everything was in a sense dimmed by the shock she had just experienced, she was aware that the loss of her money need not really affect the future which had seemed so near and concrete. Lord John Pendervil would not regret her money, though she was well aware that to his mother this loss of nearly half a million pounds would alter—well, nearly everything. But should she marry John, much as he loved her, and though he would certainly intend it should make no difference, every penny she spent after what she still possessed was gone, would have to come out of her husband's pocket.

Yet deep in her heart she knew that even that fact was not the real reason why all life had changed for her, since she had spent those few minutes with a telephone receiver held to her ear in the stone-walled pantry of Perranuth Castle. What had changed everything, as regarded herself, had been hearing George Dwight's familiar voice. She had suddenly known—even while he was breaking the news that meant so very much to her—that for good or ill it was George who mattered to her, in the sense that a man can matter to a woman. It was not the Englishman with whom she had become in a sense so much more mentally intimate than she had ever been with George, and that though they had only known each other for so short a time, who had the power of making her feel as she had felt when that voice coming from over 3,000 miles had called her his "darling girl."

Analyzes Her Feelings.

He looked at her fixedly, and his wife was made uneasy by that look, for a jeering expression had come over his mouth.

He observed in a dry tone: "I think you would be very unwise to spend the little money you've got left—if you've really only got saved out of the wreck what is now in the Mayflower Trust Co.—over anything connected with theatrical work."

"I can dispose of what I have remaining in any way I wish, and I certainly intend to go through with the production of 'A Daughter of Heth'," replied the girl firmly.

In a sense it was as if the world was still spinning round her, but she had regained something of her composure, and with every moment that went by she the more admired the way this man was taking what she knew must be such an awful blow.

"Even in the last few minutes I've thought out what I can do and can't do," she went on. "I shall be able to give you one year's salary, I mean," she made a quick calculation, "ten thousand dollars. And there will be plenty left to put on the play. But, as I said just now, of course I shan't be able to buy the lease of the theater."

"I may be able to find a man who will help as to that."

Iris stood up. She was too bewildered, too oppressed, above all too bitterly disappointed, to speak. What could Philip mean by his confident assertion? No one knew better than he did, that they had both made the most desperate attempts for over two years to find a backer, and that they had completely failed.

Pleasant HOMES

"MY HIGH SCHOOL daughter is the sweetest girl in the world, but she worries me nearly to death going to extremes on all subjects. Right now she is on a sporty, athletic jag . . . she has her naturally curly hair whacked off short, wears skirts and sweaters and goes in for whistling. Naturally she turns up her snub nose plenty at her flowered bedroom that I fixed over for her just last year and exactly to her own order. Now what in the world am I to do now . . . she wants it more tailored, she says. I would appreciate any suggestions. The rug in the room is claret broadloom and the furniture is walnut. The walls are old pink and the chintzes just as dainty and pretty as can be in blues and lavenders on an old pink ground. I really am up a stump."

Well, it wouldn't hurt to let her have a change of chintzes . . . no doubt she'll recover from her present personality and want feminity again, but in the meantime, she may be very uncomfortable indeed in her old room the way it is. So why not take down the pretty chintzes and replace them with something else. You could save these chintzes for her later, or you might want them somewhere else in the house. At any rate they won't be wasted for a rest. In their place, and leaving the room otherwise just the same, have draperies and bedspread in oyster white shantung made with a pleated flounce. Then a pleated valance and pleated ruffles on the draperies. Glass curtains could be of white or of pale old pink. The dressing table petticoat could be of pleated waite, too. Then add two chairs in a morning-glory purple . . . that would be very French looking with the colors already used in this room.

3,000 to Open Veterans' Rally At Hotel Today

Second Division Members Plan 3-Day Reunion in Washington.

Approximately 3,000 veterans, who fought through the World War with the Second Division, will open their reunion here today. Feature of the initial ceremonies will be a get-together and dance tonight at the Willard Hotel, the Army Band furnishing the music.

Tomorrow the group will make a pilgrimage to Arlington National Cemetery, where Frank J. Bart, holder of the Congressional Medal of Honor, will lay a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Dancing at the Willard to the music of the Marine Band Orchestra is on the evening program.

After a business meeting and election of officers Saturday morning the reunion will reach its climax when a memorial to the division's 4,200 war dead is dedicated on the South Ellipse, Constitution avenue near Seventeenth street.

Maj. Gen. James G. Harbord, commander of the Second Division at the battles of Belleau Wood and Soissons, will deliver the dedicatory address. Colors of ten or more overseas regiments will be massed at the rites and flowers will be laid on the memorial by Gold Star mothers and veterans' children. The program will be begun at 2 p. m.

Maj. Frank E. Mason, president of the Second Division Association, will preside Saturday. Infantrymen, marines, bluejackets and a troop of cavalry will emphasize the military atmosphere.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office

By Betty Read.

A solar-driven engine—yes, one operated by the rays of the sun—is under construction at the Smithsonian Institution and will be finished and ready for demonstration in another month.

Dr. C. G. Abbot, head of the Institution, has been harnessing the power of the sun for experimental purposes for many years and now has developed his theory to the point where he says it is a source of such tremendous energy that it may some day be used to supplement or even replace energy from other sources such as coal, gas, oil and water power.

"I have computed the power of the sun, made observations and have been able to convert about 15 per cent of the energy of the sun's rays into mechanical work," he said.

"That compares at present prices with coal as a means of energy and by September I hope to have a steam engine in full operation by the sun's rays."

But what happens on a cloudy day? Dr. Abbot was prepared for that question and tossed it off by saying that on sunny days the power would be conserved for a rainy day.

"There are a number of ways of conserving the sun's power," he said. "It can be used to pump water to a high place and released to make electricity, it can charge storage batteries or it can be preserved in several other ways.

"The same need for the sun's rays for power during the night exists as on sunless days so we had to devise methods of conserving the energy."

Dr. Abbot pointed out that harnessing the sun's power has not reached the practical point for the Eastern part of the country but is an easy matter in desert regions and the South where the rays are stronger and less interrupted by rain and clouds.

One of the most interesting uses to which he has put old Sol has been to bake his bread and meat and roast potatoes. And the method is a favorite with Mrs. Abbot who helped the experiment in its early stages by using the "solar stove" and preparing all the meals for her her family and guests at the Mount Wilson weather observatory in California during recent trips there.

"She says it is as efficient as any other kind and a lot more fun to use.

"The stove is outdoors where a series of mirrors collect the rays and reflect them on tubes filled with oil. These oils are thereby heated and circulate through a system that surrounds the oven and other cooking areas.

"She prepared her vegetables, meats, bread and so forth in the kitchen and then took them outside and popped them into the oven and could forget about them until the meal was ready," Dr. Abbot claimed.

"And one of the great features was that the kitchen was always cool because the stove was not there to heat it up. The circulation of hot oil was so protected as to retain the heat at night so the stove was always ready to use."

It makes things a lot more interesting around the Interior Department to have some of the big-wigs home for conferences. At present there is much talk of Hawaii and Alaska in the department for the governors of those two Territories are here for one of their infrequent visits. John W. Troy, of Alaska, was the first to arrive and finds the weather pretty hot, and even Joseph P. Poindexter says Hawaii was never like this.

The Treasury Department is calling anxiously for all its good swimmers to come forward and make up a team to compete in the newly organized inter-departmental swimming league. Several departments are in the league and prizes will be awarded at the conclusion of the season's weekly competitions.

While the Treasury Department has been taking on a number of new clerks, stenographers and such during the past weeks, the Bureau of Engraving and Printing has been reducing its staff. The temporary workers hired during the rush to get out the soldiers' bonus bonds are gradually being dropped. Some have been absorbed in other bureaus but the majority have not been placed in Government service again.

The Interior Department Lodge, 35, of the American Federation of Government Employes held its annual election the other night and named George A. Warren its president. First vice president is Frederick A. Heffernan; second vice president, Robert M. Matthews; secretary-treasurer, Eugenia E. Miller and sergeant at arms, Nevin B. Johnson.

A substantial increase in membership and in lodge funds over last year's figures was reported.

Court Upholds 6-Yr. Sentence For Youth, 15

But Boy Is Expected to Serve Only Part of Term at School.

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, yesterday refused to alter the sentence of a 15-year-old boy, who was ordered sent to the National Training School for Boys until he is 21.

Applicaton for a new trial had been made because the boy allegedly had been allowed to plead guilty without a lawyer and without a jury trial. The records of the court showed that, after his original arraignment in January, 1935, the youth had been allowed four days within which to obtain an attorney, and that, after neglecting to do so, he pleaded guilty to unlawful entry when formally tried.

The records showed that the superintendent of the Industrial Home School, to which he had been sent for a year, wrote Judge Bentley it was "absolutely impossible" to keep the boy in the home to serve a short sentence, following his plea that he was guilty of unlawful entry. The boy escaped from the home and thereafter played "hookey" from school for three days.

Judge Bentley then imposed the sentence to the training school, a sentence that can be modified by the officials of the school so that the boy can be released when it is deemed wise to give him his freedom.

It was explained the boy probably will be required to serve only a short portion of his sentence, since the District code directs a sentence which permits release at the age of 21, or until the officials of the home decree a prior release.

Nine Tricks Down!

It is all very well to talk of good and bad contract players, or to subdivide them further into beginners, averaging players, or experts. But in another sense such divisions are pointless. The true distinction is simply between serious and frivolous players!

Whether the cards are tossed about in joyous abandon or painstakingly weighed on the scales of judgment, it is an impressive tribute to the game itself that, from widely divergent viewpoints, every one can have a good time. But (and I cannot make that "but" too strong), just as the lion and the lamb should not set up housekeeping together, it is extremely unwise, and fatal to the evening's pleasure for the two types—serious and frivolous—to sit down at the same table. East and West in today's hand discovered the truth of this philosophy.

North-South vulnerable.

The bidding:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 club | 1 sp. (!) | 2 di. | 4 sp. (!) |
| Double | Pass | Pass | Pass |

East's psychic spade bid was typical of the "devil-may-care" player. Not stopping to figure the dangerous possibility that partner, instead of opponents, might be led astray he relied childishly on his diamond suit for his "escape."

But to his great discomfiture he heard South (who, he knew, always bid honestly) bid that very suit! West certainly could not be blamed for feeling that, no matter how light the one spade overcall was, his own freak distribution indicated a splendid chance for game. North did not allow his astonishment at hearing four spades bid against his holding to interfere with his vocal cords. It must be admitted that there was a certain emphasis on his "double." East now was trapped. He dared not run to five diamonds, particularly since South had bid that suit, sitting over him. Grinning gayly, he passed and prayed for a miracle.

But the miracle was not forthcoming. South opened the king of clubs and when North signaled with the three spot, demanding a shift, South led the six of spades! The rest of the hand was a nightmare for the declarer, North cashed every trump trick, and then led the ace and queen of clubs forcing dummy's sole remaining trump. The ace of hearts gave North the lead again and he rattled off the rest of his club suit, after which he led a diamond through East into South's major tenace. Thus, the only trick taken by the declarer was dummy's fifth trump and the 1,700 point penalty, plus North's 100 honors amply compensated North-South for the slam they could have made but probably would not have reached in the bidding.

Cardinal Binet Dies; Enlisted In French Army

Uremia Fatal to Prelate Who Won the Croix de Guerre in Ranks.

By the Associated Press.

Bes Ancon, France, July 15.—Henri Cardinal Binet, 67, who served France in the World War as an enlisted man, died today of uremia.

The cardinal was born April 8, 1869, in Juvigny, 12 miles from Soissons, which later he was to help defend from the Germans.

He was ordained a priest October 22, 1893, and volunteered for active service in the front lines in 1914, at the age of 45.

After the war, promotion came rapidly. He was made Bishop of Soissons June 16, 1920, an archbishop in 1925 and created cardinal of Bes Ancon in 1927.

Hero Under Fire.

A particularly violent and accurate salvo of 77-millimeter guns shattered a shelter along the French battle line north of Soissons during the night of December 10, 1914, and three French soldiers and one officer lay wounded in no man's land.

The captain called for volunteers to rescue their comrades Led by Sergt. Stretcher Bearer Charles Joseph Henri Binet, six men stepped up to the captain. In the face of a terrific machine gun fire they made two trips to the wrecked shelter and brought back their wounded. Two of the rescuing party also brought back machine gun bullets in their bodies.

Five days later Sergt. Binet received the Croix de Guerre.

In 1914, the Rev. Father Binet, parish priest at Soissons, although 43 years of age and eligible for the territorials, volunteered for active service in the front lines. He spent 52 months under the colors and was nearing the age of 50 when demobilized.

Veterans Remain Friends.

In spite of the dignity and decorum which go with purple robes and the red hat of cardinal, Binet liked nothing better than to receive in his palace at Besancon his former friends of the trenches.

It is related that during a congress of war veterans during 1929 the cardinal invited six of his former buddies to dinner at the palace. They drank the hard red wine of the trenches and after dinner repaired to a little smoking room where cigars and pipes and liquors were brought.

About 10 a. m., the archdeacon, general secretary to the cardinal, having some matter to refer to his chief, entered the room. In the haze and smoke the high official was horrified to behold a hard-boiled veteran, with wrinkled face, slapping a horny hand on the knee of his eminence and bellowing:

"Do you remember, Henri, that night at the Chemin des Dames—?"

Ford Would Show All Farm Animals Are 'Unnecessary'

Detroit, July 15 (AP).—Henry Ford, in an interview today, said that he hoped to prove within two years that all the animals on the farm "are unnecessary."

"We can, I believe, get a more plentiful supply of food, cheaper and better," the industrialist said, "by processing the products of the soil, instead of asking cows and chickens to do it for us. In the future, farm animals of all kinds will be out. We won't need them; we will be better without them."

Ford reiterated his oft-expressed view that the world offers more opportunity than ever for youth.

"A lot of these young fellows," he said, "have ideas in heir heads for improvement of things now used and new things that will be useful. You can't stop youth."

Ford, who will observe his 73d birthday anniversary a fortnight hence, appeared unusually well and active, despite the hot weather of the last week. He attributed his good health to the fact he had been much out of doors recently and had been taking almost daily bicycle rides on his private roadway.

City to Buy Fairground.

Lynchburg, Va., July 15.—After several months of dickering with the authorities of the Lynchburg Interstate Fair Association the city has decided to purchase the fairgrounds at a price of $35,000. The city desires the 35 acres for development into athletic facilities for baseball and football and for possible location in the future of a new high school building.

8 More Killed In Party, Labor Strife in Spain

Fascists Rounded Up, Arms Seized by Government; 2-Day Toll at 11.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 15. — Political and labor warfare in the last two days mounted to 11 lives tonight and kept Spain in a state of nervous tension.

Rumors of a possible cabinet crisis were denied. The government continued a roundup of known Fascists, arresting 150 persons and confiscating arms.

Eight persons met death in various parts of Spain today, in addition to three yesterday. A score of others were wounded.

Two were killed in Madrid and one, wounded yesterday, died today. Two Communists were killed at Seville and one rightist died at San Sebastian. A holdup man who suoght to collect contributions for Communist funds and his woman victim were shot to death.

Strike Involved.

The deaths in Madrid were a direct outcome of bitter fights between Socialists and syndicalists over a construction strike.

The Socialists were returning to work, accepting a government settlement, but the syndicalists opposed the agreement. Despite the deaths of a syndicalist and a Socialist in clashes today, officials said more strikers were returning steadily to work.

A lieutenant of engineers, Juan Bahomonde, motoring with his wife, stopped at a roadside. He told police he was approached by several men who demanded "contributions to the Communist aid fund."

Assailant Dying.

He refused, he said, and the men threatened him with a knife and a shotgun. The lieutenant then drew a revolver and shot one of the hold-up men dead. The other fired the shotgun at Senora Bahomonde's head and in turn was wounded by the husband. The woman died and the second assailant was reported dying

News of the affair caused much excitement in Seville, where Senora Bahomonde was well known. She was said to be related to the Dukes of Roca and Sotomayor.

In a stormy meeting the permanent committe of Congress decided to extend a countrywide state of alarm for 30 days.

Jose Maria Gil Robles, rightist leader, was reported to have accused the government of failure to protect citizens and preserve order, and charged officials with the responsibility for the assassination of the monarchist leader, Jose Calvo Sotelo.

Allowance to Mrs. Rogers.

Los Angeles, July 15 (AP).—Mrs. Betty Rogers, widow of Will Rogers, the humorist, today was granted an allowance of $1,500 monthly from the Rogers estate. Mrs. Rogers appeared in court with her son, Jimmy, and her brother, James K. Blake, an executor of the will. Rogers was killed last August in an airplane crash in Alaska with Wiley Post.

LOSE FAT THE EASY WAY

Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Bending and Rolling Exercises.

Here's a way to get rid of ugly fat that works hand in hand with Nature. Millions of people are losing millions of pounds of flabby flesh and getting back slender figures, without the need of starvation diets or back-breaking exercises.

Medical science has discovered that one of the causes of too much fat lies in a little gland. It is the duty of this tiny gland to make about one drop and a half every day of a vital fluid. This helps the body "burn" up food and excess fatty tissues just as a good draft of air helps the furnace to burn up coal without forming "clinkers." If this little gland doesn't make this drop and a half of fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat.

Doctors correct this condition by feeding this little gland the substance it lacks—and Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on this same method. Millions are using them with success. They are prepared by a world-famous medical laboratory. Their formula is published in every package so you know what you are taking.

So don't waste time and money with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Go to your druggist today and get a box of Marmola. Try this simple, easy way to get rid of excess fat.

One-Man Car Plea Assailed By Witnesses

Spokesmen for Capital Civic Groups Fight Buying Others.

Declare Type Is Unsafe and Slow; Company OffersExperts.

The wrath of the car-riding public began descending on the one-man street car yesterday before the Public Utilities Commission.

Whereas experts called by the Capital Transit Co., had described the one-man car as safe, speedy and economical, the first of the strap-hangers to appear called the one-man car slow and hazardous, and service in general "a disgrace to the city."

This witness was Mrs. Margaret Hopkins Worrell, president of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association, composed of 500 members. She was followed by George A. Colvin, chairman of the public utilities committee of the Manor Park Citizens Association, and a member of the transportation committee supported by the Manor Park, Chillum Heights, Brightwood and Takoma Park Citizens Associations. He said Washington deserved something better than one-man cars.

Others to Testify Today.

Other representatives of citizens associations will appear before the Public Utilities Commission today to fight the petition of the Capital Transit Co., for permission to add 40 more one-man cars to its fleet of 71.

The company would convert 20 of its new streamlined cars to the one-man type and buy 20 second-hand cars of the one-man type from Providence, R. I.

Mrs. Worrell read a resolution adopted July 2 by the executive committee of the Columbia Heights Citizens Association. This pointed out that the people of Washington were promised better car service after the merger of the two local traction companies.

"There is now being operated by the Capital Transit Co.," she read, street cars that are not only a disgrace to the city, but a reflection on the intelligence of the people who are asked to maintain and support such antiquated means of transportation.

Cast Aside in Providence.

"It is proposed to replace some of the antiquated rolling stock now in service by other antiquated cars—cars cast aside by the Providence, R. I., Street Car Co., as not being suitable for the needs of its patrons.

"The proposed installation of the cast-off Providence one-man cars is a sure way to slow up the already snail-like service, for the Capital Transit Co. tells us through the placards in its cars that 'the motorman's duties require his entire attention,' and when the additional duties of collecting fares and issuing transfers, giving information to strangers and watching front and back doors is made part of the motorman's duties it is very evident that traffic will not only be retarded, but the hazard of riding on these cars will be much enhanced."

Mrs. Worrell said that, the service being what it is and with no improvement in prospect, the company ought to reduce fares instead of asking for an increase, as it did recently.

Manor Park's Mr. Colvin agreed that Washington deserved something better than remodeled cars and cars cast off by other cities.

Favors 5-cent Fare.

"If you would put in a 5-cent fare," Colvin told the company representatives, "you would eliminate a lot of competitoin and make money."

S. R. Bowen, counsel for Capital Transit, asked Colvin if he opposed one-man cars simply because he had a preference for two-man cars.

Colvin said that was his sole reason. He said he thought a car with a motorman and a conductor was safer, but he admitted that he had never seen a one-man car in a "violent accident."

People's Counsel William A. Roberts, who is fighting extension of the one-man car, asked Colvin:

"Have you ever seen anybody killed in an airplane accident?"

"You needn't answer that," interjected Richmond B. Keech, of the P. U. C.

"Well," said Roberts, "he answered the other question."

Net Income Decreases.

J. E. Heberle, vice president and controller of the Capital Transit Co., earlier in the day had introduced a statement showing that for the 12 months ended May 31 last, the company's net income was only $39,061.58, a decrease of $855,504.03 as compared with the previous 12-month period. The items largely responsible for this drop, according to the table, were an increase of $1,163,207.48 for labor, $340,453 for materials, and $343,427 for depreciation.

Heberle's figures showed that street car workers here received in wages 36.5 per cent of the passenger revenue, which was higher than that in ten cities he listed. Nine of these cities had more one-man cars than Washington.

E. D. Merrill, vice president and general manager of the Capital Transit Co., told the commission that it would only be necessary to avoid hiring men for three or four months to take care of the shrinkage in personnel if 40 more one-man cars are installed.

Must Employ More Men.

"It should be considered, also," he said, "that business is increasing at the rate of about 9 per cent so that it will no doubt be necessary to employ men in spite of the use of additional one-man cars. We will not discharge any men because of the proposed addition of 40 one-man cars."

He said the company would use extra "leaders" at busy points. These would assist in the collection of fares by inspecting passes and collecting transfers and permitting passengers to board by the rear door of one-man cars.

William McK. Clayton, chairman of the utilities committee of the Federation of Citizens Associations, asked Merrill whether he would persist in asking for more one-man cars if it were shown that civic bodies here were virtually unanimously against such cars. Attorney Bowen objected that this was "hypothetical," and Commissioner Keech upheld the objection.

Keech also excused Merrill from answering a question by Clayton designed to show whether the North American Co., giant holding firm which controls Capital Transit, had suggested the one-man cars.

Firm Protests Condemnation Of Power Unit

Potomac Co. Challenges Constitutionality of Public Works.

The constitutionality of public works financed by the national industrial recovery act yesterday was challenged in the Supreme Court of the United States by the Potomac Electric Power Co.

The firm protested against condemnation proceedings which forced it to move a power sub-station to make room for the New Department of the Interior Building.

Through its attorneys, it asked a review of a decision handed down in the District Court of Appeals, affirming a condemnation decree by the District Federal Court.

For the lot on which sub-station No. 19 was located the condemnation jury awarded the company $23,167.

However, the firm contended that an investment of "in excess of $180,000" was destroyed when the removal was forced.

Keeper of Snakes Bitten by Reptile, But Rattler Dies

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., July 15.—When a man bites a dog, it's news, but when a snake bites a man and the snake dies, that is news!

Earl Kerns, keeper of the Edinburg snake farm, 6 miles south of here, was bitten by a horned rattler June 9 when the reptile escaped from its cage. Several witnesses declared Kerns held it aloft with the fangs buried in his hand to prove he was bitten. Today one of the witnesses returned to show a friend the snake, but was told by Kerns it had died only recently.

He took no medical treatment after being bitten, as he declared he was not afraid of a bite, and that once before when he was bitten, serum was administered and made him sick.

"I have never felt better," he said when asked if he had felt any ill effects. "The snake just couldn't take it."

Ship Passenger Tells of Crash With Freighter

District Automobile Dealer Says He Saw Approach of Golden Harvest.

Jack Pry, 2946 Legation street northwest, local automobile dealer, a guest on the rammed steamer State of Virginia, described the crash at his home here last night.

Pry, who was seated on the top deck, said he heard someone below scream "We are going to crash!" He looked up to see the freighter Golden Harvest bearing down on the steamer.

"I rushed to the center of the ship and had my life preserver on before the Golden Harvest rammed us," he said. "It was terrible. I thought the whole side of our boat had been torn off."

"Seeing that the Golden Harvest wasn't badly damaged I clambered aboard her to safety. Down below women were screaming and men running about like they were crazy, but somebody quieted them down in a few minutes."

Gov. Nice of Maryland, he said, told me that if the Golden Harvest was doing 5 knots more the State of Virginia would have been cut in two.

"While sitting on the top deck in the bow of the boat," he continued, "it looked as though the freighter would cross our bow. While I was putting on my preserver it must have changed its course because it struck us."

Report Pledged Soon on 7 Fired In Hoover Unit

Cummings Promises Early Action, Lodge No. 21, Committee Says.

A special action committee of Justice Lodge, No. 21, American Federation of Government Employes, reported last night Attorney General Homer S. Cummings "would have a report in a short time" in the case of seven dismissed Federal Bureau of Investigation employes.

The seven discharged men, all members of the lodge, were dismissed, the union said, because of organizing activities at the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The special committee interviewed Cummings yesterday afternoon asking that the men be reinstated charging "that these forced resignations were unjustified and clearly an attempt on the part of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to weaken or break up the organization."

Cummings, the committee said, promised a report in a short time. The committee submitted a brief in the case July 6. The grievance was taken before Director J. Edgar Hoover without satisfactory results, the committee said.

The special meeting held in the Odd Fellows Temple, 419 Seventh street northwest, was attended by David R. Glass, national charter president of the A. F. G. E., and Miss Berniece B. Heffner, acting president of the organization.

Child Locked In Home 'Saved' By Fire Squad

'Rescuers' Crawl Through 2d Floor Window to Enter House.

The almost inaudible click of the door lock sounded ominously to Frankie Fike's aunt yesterday when she realized her year-old nephew was locked in the house.

Frankie, the son of Sergt. Hall E. Fike, stationed at the Marine Barracks, was a disinterested prisoner in his home at 1018 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, while his aunt called the neighbors for help.

The neighbors suggested that she call the Fire Department Rescue Squad. She did, and Frankie had the thrill of being "rescued" by firemen who crawled through an upstairs window.

The child's aunt said she had left the house to go to the store and the door locked behind her.

A. F. G. E. to Start Annuities System

A new system of annuities for low-salaried Government employes, designed to protect them from loss in event they default on their payments, and permit them to borrow against it in case of sickness or other emergencies, soon will be put into operation by a new branch of the American Federation of Government Employes.

This system will be conducted by an annuity association of the A. F. G. E., which already has been incorporated under District laws, E. Claude Babcock, president of the association, now on leave, explained yesterday.

The annuity plan of the association will differ in at least three basic respects from the systems now in use by most insurance companies, Babcock asserted.

He explained that an employe might buy any amount from $1 up.

The amount he paid, Babcock went on, would be divided by his life expectancy and the result be the amount guaranteed him each year.

Nurses Settle Hours Issue With Doctors

Emergency HospitalUnit Reaches 'Amicable' Agreement.

Attendants Can Sign Up for Long or Short Tour of Duty.

The controversy between Emergency Hospital nurses and doctors over the proposed eight-hour day for nurses was "amicably settled" last night at a closed meeting of the Nurse's Alumni Association in Assembly Hall.

The settlement, it was learned from Miss Janet Fish, superintendent of nurses at the hospital, allows nurses to register for either 8-hour or 12-hour duty, or both.

Doctors, in selecting nurses, will choose them from either list, as desired by patients. In this way nurses will not be forced to work the 12-hour stretch against their will.

Karl Corby, head of the hospital board of trustees, was present at last night's meeting, acting, he said, as "mediator." Making it plain that the dispute was between the nurses and the doctors and not between the nurses and the hospital, Corby said he considered the settlement "very fair."

Miss Fish said that the present rates of pay for nurses are $5 for 8-hour duty and $6 for 12-hour duty. Those on duty for eight hours are entitled to two meals; those on duty for the longer period get three meals.

A meeting of the nurses last Saturday night to request the 8-hour day spread rumors that a nurses' strike was imminent.

The rumors were labelled false by both the nurses themselves and by B. Brent Sandidge, superintendent of the hospital. Since that time, the nurses' request has been under consideration.

Several hospitals, including Garfield, Providence, Sibley and George Washington, already operate on the 8-hour a day plan.

The nurses' viewpoint, as expressed by Inez Cadel, president of the Graduate Nurses' Association of the District, is that the 8-hour day permits nurses to "be much more alert and to give better service than if worn out from the 12-hour stretch."

Waitress Reported Hurt in Car Leap

Olga Jessie Novack, 32, of 1212 I street northwest, was in Gallinger Hospital last night for treatment for skull injuries received, police said, when she jumped from an automobile yesterday.

The woman, employed as a waitress in the 1700 block Pennsylvania avenue northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital by Clarence A. White, 3150 Seventeenth street northwest, a White House guard, who, police said, was the driver of the car.

White was arrested by Privates H. C. Johnson and W. S. Rinker, of the Third Precinct, to be held until the extent of the woman's injuries is determined. After treatment at Emergency Hospital, Miss Novack was sent to Gallinger Hospital.

Police said they had been unable to talk to the woman as she failed to regain consciousness for several hours and is in a serious condition. White, they said, refused to say anything about the incident.

Young Singing Star Is Heard In First Film

Bobby Breen Scores Hit in Simple Heart Interest Drama at Keith's.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"LET'S SING AGAIN." Principal Pictures' filmization for RKO-Radio distribution of a story and screen play by Don Swift and Dan Jarrett, starring Bobby Breen and Henry Armetta, with George Houston, Vibienne Osborne, Grant Withers, Inez Courtney, Richard Carle, Lucien Littlefield and Clay Clement. Directed by Kurt Neumann, with musical setting devised and conducted by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld. Previewed Tuesday night, July 7.

The trite story of the lad separated in his babyhood from his parents and intrusted to the questionable mercies of a small-town orphanage, whence he decamped as a stowaway hanger-on of a traveling wagon show, in this subject takes on a new lease of life by reason of the extraordinary precocity of a juvenile star who bids fair to create much the same sort of furore on the screen as he already has occasioned as a radio singer.

The action of "Let's Sing Again" has its inception in Italy, when an impatient wife deserts her student husband, who aspires to an operatic career and is on the verge of achieving it through the helpful interest of an established prima donna. Taking their small son with her to America, the mother dies and the lad is sent to the orphanage under a name not his father's. The father in the meantime has attained fame and is a noted opera and concert star. The youngster becomes the vocally gifted protege of the old broken-down Italian maestro, whose once glorious voice now is nothing more than the butt of a comedy scene in the tawdry little carnival show. A warm affection springs up between these two singers of such divergent ages and eventually they survive the bitter vicissitudes of their nomadic life and all ends as it should.

Of Simple Appeal.

The story has been told a million times in celluloid, more or less, but perhaps never with quite the simple human appeal that is exerted in this unpretentious picture. As has been pointed out in this space on several previous occasions, there is nothing flamboyant or spectacular in "Let's Sing Again." It is a modestly made and obscurely cast production that depends wholly upon the honest interest that Bobby Breen is able to bring to the part of a courageous lad who becomes the ward of a kindly and amusing old man.

The chief charm of the picture lies in the unexpectedly able singing of the cinema's pre-eminent boy soprano. Not only does Master Breen sing "Let's Sing Again," the theme number of the film, but he also does extremely well with the plaintive little "Lullaby" composed by his daddy when Billy Gordon was a baby, and, later on, acquits himself with fine credit in the difficult "Donna e Mobile" number from "Rigoletto." George Houston adds to the musical interest of the story's development by an effective rendition of the "Lullaby," numerously reprised during the story's progress, and "The Farmer in the Dell," a topical number of slightly biting lyrics aimed at the agriculturist's present plight.

During the movement of the narrative, and it is for the most part spirited, romance, melodrama and intrigue are introduced to afford adequate "acting" opportunities for Grant Withers and Inez Courtney, as a team of circus aerialists; Vivienne Osborne, as an operatic prima donna; Richard Carle, as the show owner, and numerous others.

Time Marches On.

The foremost auxiliary attraction of the new bill opening yesterday at RKO-Keith's is the new issue of "The March of Time," devoting itself to three timely topics—the present unrest in France, horse-racing and the maintenance of its comparative integrity in this country, and the amazingly rapid rise to power of President Trujillo, of Santo Domingo.

These subjects are developed with "Time's" characteristic comprehensiveness and are made additionally valuable as authoritative historical commentaries by the lucid explanations provided by the film's unseen voice.

A cartoon comedy in color, "Glee Worms," relating a fanciful story of two fireflys, to the tune of "The Glow Worm," and a new issue of the Pathe News are the remaining supplementaries of a feature that will prove one of the surprises of the season among the cinema's minor productions.

About the Showshops

EVEN before the words were out of his mouth, this desk yesterday was supplied with the text of an address delivered by F. W. Allport, of the Will H. Hays office, before the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va., in which he spoke with clarity and forcefulness upon the topic of "Motion Pictures and Public Opinion."

BELL.

We hereby tender our profound thanks to Mr. Anthony Muto, Mr. Hays' esoteric alter ego in the National Capital and probably known colloquially as "Tony" to you, for his alert thoughtfulness in providing the opportunity to scan Mr. Allport's helpful remarks concerning a matter in which he finds spacious room for thought. There is opened an almost illimitable field of discussion by Mr. Allport's expansive subject, but he manages to concentrate on the vital elements of the issue by making clear that all motion picture productions divide themselves naturally and inevitably into two major classes—entertainment films, restricted in the large view to the theater, and films which either deliberately or unintentionally contribute something to the molding of public thought on matters remote from theatrical diversion.

Those who habitually look upon "the movies" purely as a source of entertainment, ignore a tremendously vital function of the screen, the dissemination of that great and growing body of motion pictures whose object is to impart information. It is amazing to what an extent the cinema has become an influential instrument in molding national thought.

It is all too big a topic to be gone into exhaustively within the brief confines of a daily column, but these hurried and completely inadequate remarks concerning a question that everyone ought to know more about may be construed, if you wish, as fair warning that you have not heard the last of Mr. Allport and his interesting talk. Nor, for that matter, of Mr. Muto, either.

Particularly cogent and to the point are Mr. Muto's suggestions of ways and means of circumventing the prevalent discomforts of what has been described with such quaint understatement as "the heated term." Among his more fascinating solutions of a burning problem is the one having something to do with sleeping on a damp lawn within easy reach of a flock of cold Tom Collinses.

Obviously, Mr. Muto is a young gentleman of deep perceptions and helpful impulses, whom it might be worth cultivating!

"The Green Pastures," one learns from an informative bulletin from the executive offices of the Warner Brothers' organization in Washington, will be the screen attraction at the Earle Theater the week of Friday, August 7. This will make the Warner Brothers-First National picturization of the Marc Connelly stage play, that won the Pulitzer Prize the year of its original production, a competitive attraction to "Mary of Scotland," the RKO-Radio picturization of the Maxwell Anderson blank-verse drama, with Katharine Hepburn starred in the role created by Helen Hayes. "Mary of Scotland" already has been announced as the August 7 attraction at RKO-Keith's.

* * * *

And that isn't all that comes out of the Warner Brothers' hopper on a hot Wednesday afternoon. The Freres Warner, it seems, have been quietly busy these past few months thinking up a grist of musical films for the new season of 1936-37.

Starting the renaissance of the musical screen with their smashing production of "42nd Street," back in 1933, the Warners have gone along nicely with this sort of thing ever since. Now they have several on the fire—it's the weather that's responsible for these overheated metaphors—for the months that immediately impend.

First of the musicals for the new season will be "Stage Struck," with Dick Powell, Joan Blondell and The Yacht Club Boys featured. Oh, them Yacht Club Boys! You should have heard them offstage when they were at the Earle recently.

"Let's Pretend," a romantic comedy with music, will enlist the abilities of Patricia Ellis and James Melton, as a newly formed team, and Melton also will be seen and heard in the principal role of "The Desert Song," translated into celluloid by the Technicolor process.

The Dick Powell-Ruby Keeler coalition will be revived in "The Fortune Hunter," with songs, and in "Ready, Willing and Able." Powell also will head the cast of the new "Gold Diggers of 1937."

In addition to these films, Warners also will make the screen version of "White Horse Inn," in which Al Jolson will star on the stage of the Radio City Music Hall; "Mister Melody," which will have a radio background, and "Three-a-Day," a story of vaudeville troupers on Broadway and out in "the sticks."

You know those Warner boys, "They Love to Singa!"

Mildred Harris Chaplin, first wife of the battered derby and big shoes, is announced as the star of the new floor show opening tonight at the Cocoanut Grove, according to an eleventh-hour dispatch from Bill Merriam. Although Miss Harris has appeared here several times since, as a star of vaudeville, her most memorable local appearance in person was 'way back when. Recently divorced from the Charlot and at the height of her career in films, Mildred Harris Chaplin made her first Washington appearance on the apron of the Metropolitan Theater—sometimes flattered by being called a stage—in conjunction with the Thursday, Friday and Saturday showings of a motion picture in which she played the leading feminine role. That picture was "The Woman in His House," a Louis B. Mayer production—before Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ever had been thought of—directed by John M. Stahl. It was sent down to the Crandall organization with a set of "stills," but not even a press book, for a pre-release engagement to establish "exhibition value" for the entire country. So "Wild Bill" Rudolph and your present reporter "went to town" on it. Part of the "going to town" was to bring Mildred Harris Chaplin in for the personal appearances. And she was scared to death! She will have a good laugh over that when she gets here this time.

New Film Plays And Holdovers For Next Week

Amusement Program Hits Midsummer Stride in Theaters and Open.

"Counterfeit," Columbia Pictures' film story of the Treasury Department's relentless war on the surreptitious gentlemen who make their own money, will be shown for the first time in Washington as chief feature of the screen bill beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. The principal roles in the revelation of the exploits of a little publicized branch of Uncle Sam's secret service are taken by Chester Morris, Margot Grahame, who made her American debut as leading woman with Victor McLaglen in "The Informer," and Lloyd Nolan. On the stage, the chief attraciton will be supplied by Benny Davis and his "Star Dust Revue," introducing a new group of potential stars of 1937.

Tod Browning, who formerly dirricted a majority of the most effective of the late Lon Chaney's screen vehicles, is responsible for the "chills-and-fever" quality of "The Devil Doll," chief feature of the screen portion of the bill announced for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Fox Theater. The foremost roles are played by Lionel Barrymore in the title part, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Lawton and the late Henry B. Walthall. The story is an exciting mystery tale of unique character and quality. On the stage, the bill will be co-headlined by Kenny Baker and Charles "Slim" Tumblin, one of the foremost of the remaining blackface comics. Other acts wil be supplied by Joe and Jane McKenna, the Elida Ballet and Eleanor Tennis, dancer.

As was to have been expected of a picture of such scope, vivid action and staggering climax, "San Francisco," co-starring Clark Gable, Jeannette MacDonald and Spencer Tracy, will continue for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, where it has attracted overflows at every performance since last Friday's opening. Ted Healy, Jessie Ralph, Jack Holt, Al Shean and hundreds more also are prominently cast. The short subjects also will be held over.

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, supported by Alison Skipworth, Porter Hall, Lumsden Hare and an excellent cast will renew the downtown popularity of Paramount's "The Princess Comes Across" at the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The story is of a Brooklyn showgirl who masquerades as a Swedish princess to crash the Hollywood studios. There is a good bit of travesty in this subject and a wealth of clever comedy. The feature will be augmented by short sound subjects and full, 15-minute newsreel.

After two successful weeks at the Palace, "Private Number," costarring Loretta Young and Robert Taylor, will resume its run on F street as chief feature of the screen bill for the new week, beginning tomorrow, at Loew's Columbia Theater. The story concerns a rich young man who marries his mother's maid and encounters a few consequent social difficulties. Comedy, cartoon and newsreel will complete the bill.

"Dr. Jeckyll and Mr. Hyde," the film version of the story by Robert Louis Stevenson, with Frederic March in the dual title role, will be revived as major feature of the bill at the Little Theater, for the week beginning Sunday. As a companion attraction will be shown the Resettlement Administration's production of "The Plow That Broke the Plains." Short reel subjects will complete the program.

Youngsters and grown-ups are responding in large numbers to the offer of free swimimng instruction in Glen Echo Park's splendidly appointed Crystal Pool. In addition to the beginners these torrid days, the natatorium is crowded with seekers after respite from the heat, who divide the time between the cooling water of the pool and the hot sands of the "ocean beach" adjoining. All of the other 50-odd amusement devices at Glen Echo are in full midsummer operation.

"Arizona," Augustus Thomas' stirring drama of the United States Cavalry, revived for a fortnight's engagement at the Rroadside Theater, will enter its second capacity week next Monday night. Prominent in the cast are Betty Grey, Richard Kreuzberg, Virginia True, Jesse E. Veitch, Lansing Hall and numerous others.

A program combining orchestral music, opera and drama will be given on the Washington Monument Grounds next Tuesday night, July 21, as the sixth summer festival program. The Washington Civic Symphony Orchestra, the Estelle Wentworth Opera Company and one of Washington's most distinguished actresses will be the principal participants in this National Sylvan Theater entertainment.

Two Harried Actors Evade "Law"

Here we have Master Bobby Breen, the prodigious boy vocalist, and that reliable tip-tilted comedian, Henry Armetta, as they appear in one of the more ominous moments in the action of "Lets' Sing Again," first of Bobby's starring vehicles. As refugees from a wagon-show, in which some dire plotting has been going on, they are shown about to make their getaway from the lunch wagon, where a State policeman has left a lookout for their apprehension. It was lucky they escaped, otherwise Bobby's dad never would have found him. "Let's Sing Again" opened yesterday on the screen at RKO-Keith's.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Hollywood, July 15.

Many of the pictures made in Hollywood could be recast and a male star substituted for a female without changing the story greatly. Take the current flicker hit, "San Francisco."

GINGER ROGERS.

Suppose Metro wanted this picture as a vehicle for Mae West. Mae could have owned the cabaret on the Barbary Coast; it seems a more suitable bit of casting than Clark Gable. And a young man, a singer, could have come in search of the job. This role could be played by Nelson Eddy. Then, instead of the other man being Spencer Tracy, the priest, it would be another woman who could be a Salvation Army lass. Practically the same story could be told. Certainly, this wouldn't have interferred with the earthquake—which is really the picture.

Changes like this could be done with many of the hits. If necessary, it could have been "Miss Deeds Goes to Town."

* * * *

Seriously, if you were the producer, how would you cast the picture you have seen? Many actors are given roles because the producer says the public wants to see them in those parts. But do you?

* * * *

Recast the flickers yourself. Send them to me, and I'll let the producers see who you really wanted. Would William Powell be your choice for "The Great Ziegfeld"? Would Charles Laughton have played Captain Bligh in "Mutiny on the Bounty"? Would Ginger Rogers always be Fred Astaire's dancing partner? Who would be your selection to play Armand to Garbo's "Camille"? . . . Here's your chance to have your say. Say it.

* * * *

He was hired to develop this idea and fashion it into a screen play. He was given a collaborator. The two men worked for several weeks on the story. About the middle of the yarn they reached a certain situation, and were puzzled about what line to pursue to continue. After several suggestions, the writer who had sold the original idea said: "Let's run the picture and see exactly how it comes out. I forgot the details." His collaborator believed he was kidding. "Run the picture." he said. "Why, we're only writing it."

The writer of the original explained that he had taken the idea from a foreign picture yet to be released in this country.

They got a print of the picture and ran it in the projection room. The collaborator saw that it was practically the same story that they were writing. He said that the studio should be told.

* * * *

The producer of the picture was told. The picture had been cast and the very important star wanted to do it. There was only one thing to do; the studio bought the foreign picture, and it was never shown in this country. The Hollywood version was made, released, and was a box office success. But, of course, if you really know Hollywood, even this story doesn't amaze you.

* * * *

The Marxes said it was okay, and Chico, rented the Biltmore Theater one day last week for a rehearsal of their vaudeville material of "A Day at the Races." They had been rehearsing all morning, when the manager of the theater went to the troupe and said that he forgot to tell them that the theater had been hired from 1 to 2 o'clock that day for a political rally, by one of the many political organizations in Los Angeles.

The Marxes said it was okay. They would stop rehearsing for that hour. They did. Several speakers got up on the stage and made hot campaign speeches. Then Harpo Marx, without make-up, walked up on the stage and started to make a political speech. The audience didn't recognize him. Harpo was delighted to be able to talk from the stage, and waxed eloquent. He talked and shouted, and whenever he wanted applause he pointed to the large photograph of the candidate. Then Harpo took his seat in the audience, and after several more speeches the plate was passed about for contributions. Everyone was delighted to see Harpo contribute a great number of bills. By now they must know that it is stage money.

Strikers Paralyze Mexican Oil Fields

Mexico City, July 15 (AP).—Twenty-four hour strikers paralyzed large sections of Mexico's oil industry today while the capital reflected increased alarm over a prospective electric walkout.

Employes of Aguila, Pierce, Petro-Mex, Mexican Gulf and some other companies at Tampico, refused to participate in the oil strike because, they said, the notice was too short. But militant strikers of the Huasteca Petroleum Co (a Standard Oil of New Jersey subsidiary) picketed offices and refused to allow officials to enter.

The oil strike was called in sympathy with the wage demand of 850 Huasteca workers in the Ebano and Cerro Azul oil fields.

Last-minute efforts to avert the power strike, called for noon tomorrow by employes of the Mexican Light & Power Co., continued. It was reported President Cardenas was taking a hand in the negotiations by long-distance telephone from the state of San Luis Potosi.

Fight on Paralysis By 'Spray' Pressed

Montgomery, Ala., July 15 (AP).—Encouraged by the report of only one new case, health authorities pressed ahead today with the systematic work of administering a new nasal spray to children in the affected areas of the infantile paralysis outbreak.

Dr. J. N. Baker, State health officer, said physicians in all of the north Alabama counties were using the new spray of picric acid and alum recommended by the United States Bureau of Public Health as a preventative.

Dr. Charles Armstrong, of the Federal Health Service, was in Birmingham tonight to explain the use of the spray to physicians from surrounding counties. He planned to visit Decatur and other north Alabama cities on this inspection court.

Records at the State health department today showed a total of 146 cases with 9 deaths in Alabama. Latest reports here placed Tennessee's cases at 15 and Mississippi at 4.

Confiscated Dagger Returned to Quezon

Manila, P. I., July 15 (AP).—Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Commonwealth today was presented with a dagger he surrendered to an American officer after the Philippine uprising of 1900 was crushed.

Gen. John W. Gulick, commander of Corregidor, made the presentation at Malacanang Palace on behalf of Col. Lawrence Miller, retired, of Washington, D. C.

410 Soil Contracts Signed.

Leonardtown, Md., July 15.—The work of correcting, signing and checking soil conservation contracts has been about completed here in St. Marys County, and 410 contracts have been signed by St. Marys County farmers.

Nats Lose 6-4 Decision to White Sox, Drop to Fourth Place

Yanks Divide Pair With Browns

Yanks Take Finale, 7-4, Malone and Gomez Subdue Champs.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—The league-leading Yankees and second-place Detroit Tigers divided honors today in the doubleheader opener to their "crucial" series, as Mickey Cochrane returned to his job as manager of the world's champions.

Goose Goslin's homer with two mates on base, and Schoolboy Rowe's seven-hit pitching gave the Tigers the first game 5 to 1, but the Yanks came back to score early in th second game, and behind Pat Malone's tight relief pitching pulled out a 7 to 4 decision.

In the opener, Rowe and Charley Ruffing hooked up in a pitching duel for most of the way, with the Detroit hurler taking the edge in the fourth when Goslin's three-run homer climaxed a four-run spree. Charley Gehringer wound up the scoring with a circuit clout in the eighth. The only Yankee run came in the third, when Rowe walked three men to force the tally.

In the nightcap, Vic Sorrell, the Tigers' starter, was unable to go through the third inning, largely because the Detroit infield fell apart.

Furr Certain He'll Outslug Barney Ross

By Bill McCormick.

The local 147-pound cock of the walk has a penchant for getting himself in trobule again—and laughing off the whole matter.

He is cocky, determined and apparently not afraid of anything that walks on two legs or four—and therein lies most of the color that has made him Washington's greatest drawing card.

"Dempsey?" Certainly, it's all right with me if he referees," he agreed without hesitation. "Joe Puss or Joe Driftwood can work the bout if you want them to. Somebody, I think it was Sam Langford, once said he brought his own referee—meaning his right hand—into the ring with him. Them's my sentiments and any referee who can count up to ten after I floor Ross will be all right."

"When I was fighting preliminary fights back in the old bootleg boxing days around here, I made up my mind some day to be not only a main-bout fighter, but a champion. Well, I made the main-event ranks in pretty good time, then started after a title. I got it—the District welterweight championship—and I've defended it plenty of times.

"That District title's a pretty good title, but it's not as good as a world's championship. That's what I'm gonna get from Mr. Barney Ross—and I'll get it by a knock-out."

Courageous? Harry Groves, who trained Furr for the best fights he ever made and again has taken charge of Phillip for his big chance, once tried to get his own fighter bumped off, and therein lies the story.

A Lesson to Be Taught.

It seems that Phillip, then only a semifinalist, had been kicking over the traces on occasion. Groves had a sure cure for that. He would get his own fighter beaten, just to teach him a lesson.

For the purpose, Furr was matched with a fine young fighter from Baltimore. To get the match, Groves had to pay out of his own pocket the difference between a semifinalist's purse and a main-eventer's usual rakeoff. This he did willingly, figuring it was worth it to whip Furr into line.

Much to Grove's surprise, Phil went to work on the man who was supposed to beat him as he never had gone to work before. At the end of the contest, Phillip won a unanimous decision—and Groves didn't knw what to do.

"Thought you were smart, didn't you, Harry?" he taunted Groves. "Well I knew you had to pay that fellow his usual price to get him in that semifinal with me, so I bet all our money on me to win. I'll give you back what it cost you to get him with me, even though you were trying to get me licked. But, let this be a lesson to you. I can beat bums like that without training. I'm a main-event fighter. Get me some real opposition and I'll train alright."

From that time on, Furr accepted nothing but the best of opposition.

Out of the ring Furr has managed to get into more scrapes than most people could get into in a lifetime. Nothing vicious or mean, but just things that ordinary people wouldn't get into.

And there you have the color which has made him a great card.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 15.—Mel Harder won his thirteenth victory of the season as the Cleveland Indians came from behind to beat the Athletics, 6 to 4, today.

The Tribe won in the sixth when Vosmik doubled to left and scored on Knickerbocker's single that went through Puccinelli. Knickerbocker took third on the error and scored when Harder came through on the bunting end of a squeeze play.

Earnshaw Is Acquired By St. Louis Cards

St. Louis, July 15 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinal management today announced the acquisition of the veteran pitcher, George Earnshaw, from the Brooklyn Dodgers. Earnshaw will report tomorrow.

To Brooklyn went Eddie Morgan, rookie outfielder, now with Columbus of the American Association, after a trial with St. Louis early in the season. Morgan will report to Brooklyn at the end of the 1936 season.

U. S. Olympic Team Off To Games

Hefty Athletes Complain of Diet as 700 Lbs. of Beef Is Eaten.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard S. S. Manhattan, Enroute to Berlin, July 15.—With only the illness of Harold Smallwood, national 400-meter champion from California, marring an otherwise perfect getaway, America's Olympic team quickly settled into its daily routine as the S. S. Manhattan steamed toward the scene of the eleventh Olympiad.

Smallwood developed an attack of appendicitis shortly before embarking. He had a slight attack two days ago, but kept it a secret and came aboard on his own power. He immediately reported to the sick bay, however, for an examination by Dr. Herbert Lawson, team physician.

"An operation will not be necessary as far as I can determine now," Lawson said. "Smallwood's temperature is 100, his pulse normal. An ice pack treatment probably will suffice to alleviate the condition."

Lawson Robertson of Pennsylvania, head coach of the track and field team, and his assistant, Dean Cromwell, of Southern California, were both optimistic over the chances of Smallwood after a second examination tonight indicated improvement. The West Coast runner was removed to the ship's infirmary.

Fitch May Substitute.

Robertson said he would substitute Al Fitch, of Southern California, in the 400-meter run if Smallwood's condition takes a turn for the worse before Friday—the deadline for a change in the entries. Fitch finished fourth in the final tryouts.

The Olympic athletes were quartered comfortably in tourist class, although many complained of the heat below decks. Others, including Jack Torrence, the Baton Rouge, La., shot putter now scaling a feathery 326 pounds, expressed themselves as dissatisfied with the training menu limitations.

For luncheon the athletes had roast beef, baked potatoes, stewed celery, milk, tea and baked apple. The commissary reported that 700 pounds of beef were consumed.

Roberison prescribed rest for most of the track athletes, especially Gene Venzke and Glen Hardin, who are 6 pounds underweight. The girls, who have been idle for a week, resume training tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—America's challenge to the world for athletic supremacy was under full steam tonight bound for Berlin and the eleventh Olympic Games.

Survivors of a bitter internecine fight to bar their participation as a gesture of protest against Chancellor Hitler's policies, and winners of a battle of dollars to balance their budgets, 334 men and women competitors and half a hundred officials embarked in the liner Manhattan shortly after noon.

Save for a lone picket who strode up and down the dock, bearing a placard which said: "Boycott Hitler Germany; fight for tolerance, freedom and liberty," no reference to the Nazi situation and no untoward incident marred the take-off of what is regarded as Uuncle Sam's most powerful foreign athletic expedition.

Insignia Hoisted.

Half an hour before the Manhattan backed into the river, the Olympic insignia with five intertwined circles was hoisted to the top of the aft mast.

Avery Brundage, of Chicago, president of the American Olympic Committee, assisted by Capt. Harry Manning of the Manhattan, presided over the brief ceremonies. The sun

Warrenton Fans Honor Buddy Lewis at Stadium

Warrenton's Fans Honor Lewis

200 Baseball Addicts Journey Here for Chicago Game.

Baseball-minded citizens of Warrenton, Va., yesterday descended upon Griffith Stadium en masse, honored Third Baseman Buddy Lewis in pre-game ceremonies at home plate, and saw one of the season's most exciting ball games.

"Warrenton Day" at Griffith Stadium, sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and the Peoples Drug Stores, was marred only by the defeat of the Nats by the White Sox as the pro-Washington contingent cheered madly for the Nats to overcome Chicago's early lead.

Led by Mayor Frank, the motor cavalcade of Warrenton fans was escorted through Virginia by a special convoy of State police and were met at the south end of Key Bridge by another escort of Maj. Brown's Washington police who directed them to the stadium.

Griffith Greets.

Mayor Frank made the presentation to Lewis as Warrenton men, women and children gathered about home plate. Lewis had been adjudged the most popular player by a close margin over Second Baseman Ossie Bluege, who long has been a favorite with Warrenton fans.

The Warrenton delegation saw Lewis make only one hit during the afternoon and bat into the double play that ended the game, but Lewis provided a thrill in the first inning when he went far to his left and made a force play on Bonura's hot grounder.

Kinsey Says Helen Wills Better Than When She Beat Jacobs

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 15.—Helen Wills Moody, still silent on her national championship tournament plans, is playing better tennis now than when she defeated Helen Jacobs to win the All-English title last year, her practice partner, Howard Kinsey, said today.

"She has more speed, a harder serve and more confidence," said Kinsey, who has played once or more a week with the San Francisco matron.

He added:

"Mrs. Moody is quicker on her feet. 'Drop shots' do not bother her as much. Once she was weak in this department. Now she anticipates the shots more. I believe she will regain the national title easily if she decides to compete next month."

During a recent Eastern trip Mrs. Moody indicated she would return for the American championships at Forest Hills, N. Y. Since returning home, however, she has been noncommittal, although practicing strenuously meanwhile.

Kinsey is one of those who believe she will be back on the firing line shooting for her eighth national crown. Only last week he helped her draw up a tournament schedule, starting at East Hampton, N. Y., August 3, in case she decided on the trip.

Heat Defers Game; History Is Made

Cincinnati, July 15 (AP).—For the first time within the memory of the oldest fan, hot weather caused postponement today of a scheduled major league baseball game—that between the Cincinnati Reds and the Brooklyn Dodgers tomorrow.

General Manager Larry S. MacPhail of the Reds said after a conferrence with John Gorman of the Brooklyn team that because of the heat, and the night game tonight, the scheduled contest would be played as part of a double-header here Friday, August 28.

A. J. French Wins.

Los Angeles, July 15 (AP).—A. J. French, of Huntington Park, Calif., won the national Elks championship today with a 54-hole medal score of 78-78-72—228. Curtis Reed, Chillicothe, Ohio, winner of the Elks title in 1935, was fifth with 238.

Western Links Medal Taken By Zadalis

Omahan Shoots Second 69 to Top Amateurs in Tourney.

By the United Press.

Happy Hollow Country Club, Omaha, Nebr., July 15.—Matt Zadalis, 26-year-old Omaha public course star, became the medalist in the thirty-seventh annual Western Amateur Golf Tournament today when he shot a brilliant 69, 3 under par, for a 36-hole total of 138. Yesterday Zadalis posted a 69.

The slim Lithuanian blasted into the lead early in the day. His total withstood the challenges of the field of crack amateurs throughout a blistering day of 100-degree temperatures.

Goodman Gets 76.

Fred Haas, jr., New Orleans collegian who was runner-up in the recent national intercollegiate tourney, turned in his second consecutive sub-par round—a 71—which, added to his 70 of yesterday, gave him a 141 aggregate.

Tomorrow two 18-hole matches will be played.

Victors Drive DeShong to Showers

Hurler Yields Five Runs in First, Weaver Goes to Rescue.

By Shirley Povich.
Sports Editor of The Post.

Jimmy DeShong, Washington's leading pitcher, yesterday held the White Sox to six hits in the first inning—and pitched the Chicago club to a 6-4 victory over the Nats.

DeShong, in fact, never did get the White Sox out in that festive first inning. Monte Weaver, who was called in to relieve the inexpert DeShong, attended to that chore after the Sox had accumulated a 5-0 lead.

It was no fault of Weaver's that the Nats did not win the ball game. First checking the White Sox uprising in the opening inning, he allowed the socking Sox only five hits over the remainder of the route, but with the tying runs on base on two occasions, the Nats were unequal to the demands, and slumped to fourth place behind the Cleveland Indians.

Bad on Bases.

It was 6-0 by the end of the fourth when the Sox wheedled another run out of Weaver, and the Nats finally wrung a single run out of Vernon Kennedy in their half of the inning on a hit by Travis following a pair of walks.

They had their big chance in the sixth, but a bit of stupid base running limited their attack against Kennedy to three runs that reduced the White Sox margin to the final score of 6-4.

Kennedy, who allowed only two hits to that point, pitched a pair of singles to Chapman and Lewis to start the sixth and with one out Johnny Stone scored 'em both with a triple against the rightfield fence that Haas caught but couldn't hold. Stone scored on a wild pitch and the Nats had the tying runs on bases a moment later when Travis walked and Bolton singled to center.

Bolton Caught.

With only one out, the situation had grand possibilities for the Nats, but Bolton dealt 'em a terrific setback when he succeeded in getting trapped off first base. The upshot of it was that Bolton made second, but Travis, who was forced to advance, was out at third. Red Kress' fly provided the third out.

The Nats rang a loud false alarm in the ninth, too. When the rapidly wilting Kennedy walked both Kress and Bluege to start the inning, the Nats again had the tying runs on base. Carl Reynolds was sent in to pinch hit for Weaver and with Manager Bucky Harris disdaining the orthodox game of a sacrifice bunt, Reynolds flied out to Rosenthal.

A moment later the Nats had the winning run on first base when Jesse Hill walked to fill the bases with only one out, and Manager Jimmy Dykes relieved the faltering Kennedy with John Whitehead.

Saves Game.

Whitehead pitched only one ball and saved the ball game. It was a pitch that Buddy Lewis smacked on the ground to Second Baseman Hayes who converted it into a double play that sealed the Nats' fate.

Boston, July 15.—John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood scored a handy victory in the 6-furlong John Hancock Handicap, spring of the mid-week program at Suffolk Downs today before a crowd of 20,000 in 1:11.2, to pay $3.60.

The son of Royal Minstrel came from behind to score by a length over D. J. Sullivan's Dreel, which had a neck on Donald Christmas' Accolade, which in turn bested the Corsicana Stable's Polish Beau by a length for show money.

Dreel brought $4.80 to place and Accolade was worth $3 show.

Out in Front.

Accolade broke out front, but Dreel and Polish Beau were with him, and when he was taken back a few strides from the start they went to the front together. Head and head they raced to the stretch turn.

Singing Wood, away last, was making his move meanwhile and saving ground at the stretch turn. He got to the leaders a stride beyond the eighth pole. Polish Beau was already fading, but Dreel battled it out until a furlong from home where Jockey Gilbert gave the winner a cut with his bat and surged to a handy victory.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VESTED POWER, $3.80, $3.20, $2.40; GOLDEN EFFORT, $16.60, $6.40; SCOTCH PEPPER, $4.20.

VESTED POWER was steadied along back of the pace, did not begin moving up until leaving the backstretch, went into contention with a rush and drew out steadily through the closing sixteenth. GOLDEN EFFORT was a forward factor all the way. SCOTCH PEPPER forced the early pace and weakened slightly in the last three sixteenths. LOLOMA, well placed, was unable to improve her position when called upon. MISS ANXIETY displayed good speed for the first half mile, faltering in the closing test. HONEY SWEET never could reach a position of prominence.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:54. Off at 2:56. Winner, J. U. Grattan's blk. g. NOEL H. displayed speed from the outset, escaped the interference that occurred leaving the backstretch, drew away into a long lead and was never threatened. ROYAL RANK was going gamely at the close. ROMNEY ROYAL stumbled and almost unseated his rider in the interference. Richards got back into the saddle and moved up stoutly nearing the stretch. His effort was much better than chart shows. MR. CANRON was racing with the pace when he stumbled and fell. HYPNOTIST was unable to avoid the prostrate horse and also fell.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:32. Winner, John Hay Whitney's br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DOWN UNDER, $10.60, $6.80, $5.80; GOOD OMEN, $19.40, $7.80; INFINATA, $3.60.

DOWN UNDER went into contention in the opening furlong, was taken to the outside approaching the half-mile ground, followed in closest pursuit of the pace established by GOOD OMEN, wore the latter down inside the last furlong and was going willingly at the end. GOOD OMEN displayed good speed and fought it out willingly to the close. INFINATA, well placed early, dropped back, came to the outside in the stretch and closed going stoutly. KEOKEE, hustled into contention, moved up threateningly midway of the turn only to weaken in the closing drive. MILLIMETER, well placed, was unable to keep up under pressure. PAUL JUNIOR never could reach the leaders. THUMBS DOWN was far back. REELECTION was never prominent, racing back in the ruck all the way.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $34.40.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:03. Winner, P. M. Pike's blk. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EBONY LADY, $3.40, $2.60, $2.20; SUN APOLLO, $3.40, $2.40; DANCING DOLL, $2.80.

EBONY LADY, away fast, was taken under steadying restraint, moved up stoutly on the inside leaving the backstretch, gained a slight lead before reaching the stretch, met determined opposition from DANCING DOLL and just lasted to hold SUN APOLLO safe. The latter, on the outside all the way, closed stoutly through the stretch and would probably have been the winner in another stride. BLACK BUDDY, away slowly, moved up menacingly on the outside rounding the far turn, weakening in the last quarter mile. PURPIBER showed good early speed, dropping back after rounding the far turn.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The John Hancock Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:34. Off at 4:37. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SINGING WOOD, $3.60, $3.00, $2.40; DREEL, $4.80, $3.20; ACCOLADE, $3.00.

SINGING WOOD, permitted to settle into his stride, was not hurried in the run down the backstretch, threaded his way through the field in the stretch and won going away. DREEL, under slight restraint while following the pace, closed gamely under punishment in the stretch run. ACCOLADE, slightly reserved early, dropped back leaving the backstretch and came willingly on the outside through the last furlong. POLISH BEAU had good speed, was much used in disposing of HAPPY BOLIVAR and faltered in the stretch run. SPIXI was unable to reach the leaders. HAPPY BOLIVAR tired after displaying early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BILLY I. $10.00, $4.80, $4.00; AHRIMAN, $7.00, $4.80; FELSA, $5.00.

BILLY I was rated along under slight restraint after going to a prominent position, took command in the stretch, drew out, but had to be hard ridden at the end to hold AHRIMAN safe. The latter, a trailer for almost the first 5 furlongs, closed with a rush and was overtaking the winner at every stride at the end. FELSA, in closest pursuit of the early pace, gained the lead nearing the stretch, though unable to maintain his advantage under pressure in the closing jaunt. KEARSAGE took command after rounding the first turn, drew clear only to falter in the last three furlongs. HOLLYHOCK never was prominent. SWAMP ANGEL was far back all the way. BLACK TOREADOR faltered after going a half mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NOCTURNLABE, $82.80, $35.00, $14.20; LAST ROMANCE, $9.20, $5.40; GUARDIAN, $4.20.

NOCTURNLABE, taken back of the pace, moved up on the inside at the stretch turn, caught leaders tiring nearing the furlong pole and had enough left to stall off LAST ROMANCE. The latter, as usual, was slow to begin, moved up on the outside and closed with good energy in the stretch run. GUARDIAN took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along in front withstood determined opposition from MOUNTAIN ELK, disposed of him and was unable to maintain his advantage under punishment. MARFREE closed some ground, though never able to endanger the leaders. BLESSED EVENT, outrun early, saved ground at the stretch turn, though never able to threaten. MOUNTAIN ELK stopped badly after going six furlongs.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 6:18. Off at 6:20. Winner, B Blume's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BYRDEX, $8.00, $6.20, $3.80; SURE HOUR, $6.20, $4.00; TRUJILLO, $5.40.

BYRDEX went to the front in the run to the first turn and was rated along with slight restraint and held sway to the end. SURE HOUR, in closest chase of the winner from virtually the start and held on gamely to the end. TRUJILLO, restrained for the first half mile, closed gamely under punishment in the stretch run. MISS JONES raced well placed the entire trip. BONFALON, bettered slightly at the start, closed a big gap. STILL ALARM was bumped at the start and never could enter into contention. SOCIETY COLUMN never could enter into serious contention.

Tickets on Sale For the Ross, Furr Bout

Turner, Ahern and Post to Handle Ducats; Interest Mounts.

Tickets will be placed on sale this afternoon for the three-star show of champions which will bring World Welterweight Champion Barney Ross and District Welterweight Champion Phil Furr together at Griffith Stadium next Wednesday night with all-time Champion Jack Dempsey as referee.

As interest in the great natural rises to white-hot heat, Champion Ross will arrive here early Saturday morning to go through his final training routine.

The tickets will be sold at Joe Turner's ticket office, Annapolis Hotel; Goldie Ahearn's, Ninth and E streets, and at the cashier's window, lobby floor of The Washington Post building. The ticket office at The Post will dispose of all classes of tickets and will remain open 24 hours a day, every day in the week.

The intense interest being shown in the bout is partially indicated by the advance reservations, which are larger than those for any other fight in Washington, Baltimore, too, which usually does not contribute any customers to a bout in the Capital, is evincing great interest in the contest and a large number of reservations already have been received in the ticket office in that city.

The tickets are scaled at $1.15 general admission; $2.30 reserved; $3.45 boxes and ringside elevation, and $4.60 ringside, all including all taxes. Because of the cost of the outstanding card and because the show is being promoted for the benefit of The Washington Post Summer Camp Fund for underprivileged children, it has been agreed by all parties that the free list will be completely suspended.

Champion Ross will arrive Saturday morning at 8:45. He will go from the Union Station to an air-conditioned suite which has been reserved for him at the exclusive Carlton Hotel. He will train the same afternoon at a camp tentatively decided upon. Definite decision on the training site will be made today when the sponsors of the bout confer with him by long-distance telephone.

Burroughs Girls Loom as Threats in Playground Net Event

Miss O'Steen Faces Hard Battle

Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell Impressive at Rosedale.

Another half dozen of Washington's younger feminine racquet manipulators stroked their way into the round of 16 in the District Girls Playground tournament yesterday at Takoma and Rosedale. Virtually all of the matches produced a torrid brand of play and, in some instances, tennis bordering on brilliant.

Leading the advance movement were Helen Orme and Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs, title-winning doubles combination last season, who blasted their way through stubborn opposition in a manner that bodes no good for the defending champions. Together with Evelyn Lewis, of Sherwood, the pair gained the final bracket at Rosedale.

Slim and trim but determined, Miss Orme disposed of Edith Lagvado, a newcomer to tournament competition, in three sets after losing the first 4—6. She won by 6—1, 6—2. Miss McDowell routed Brenda Kienny, of Garfield, 6—0, 6—1.

Champion Easy Victor.

Willie O'Steen, pride of Virginia avenue, who is defending the laurels she captured last season, polished off Helen Burns, of Potomac avenue, in straight sets, losing only one game in the first cluster. She will meet the winner of today's lone match involving Rosie Rosenbloom, of Potomac, and Charlotte Mataja, of Burroughs, for the fourth Rosedale position.

Two of last year's quarter-finalists, Barbara Boose and Mary Gray, of Twin Oaks, staged one of the bitterest court duels yet produced by the tourney, Miss Boose finally winning by the figures of 2—6, 8—6, 9—7. Both girls were on the verge of exhaustion at the finish. Results:

Results of yesterday's matches:

At Takoma Park—Barbara Boose (Takoma Park) defeated Mary Gray (Twin Oaks), 2—6, 8—6; 9—7; Irma Williard (Takoma Park) defeated Margaret Gray (Twin Oaks), 6—0, 6—0; Hazel Bishopp (Takoma Park) defeated Edith Goodwin (Phillips), 6—4, 6—1.

At Rosedale—Evelyn Lewis (Sherwood) defeated Rose Mary Tomardy (Hoover), 6—2, 6—1; Lucille McDowell (Burroughs) defeated Brenda Kienny (Garfield), 6—0, 6—1; Willie O'Steen (Virginia Avenue) defeated Helen Burns (Potomac Avenue), 6—1, 6—0; Helen Orme (Burroughs) defeated Edith Lagvado (Potomac Avenue), 4—6, 6—1, 6—2.

Hayes flied to center, Dykes singled to center scoring Bonura. Sewell got a fluke single attempting to get his bat out of the way of a pitch, and Appling scored, Kennedy singled to center scoring Dykes.

At this point, Manager Harris deduced that DeShong was ineffective and waved him off the mound. He called in Monte Weaver who retired Radcliffe for the third out and then pitched his heart out for the next eight innings only to be frustrated by the Nats' helplessness at bat.

"We have the best athletes in major and minor sports ever to represent us," said Brundage. "Their records of the past two years speak for themselves."

"But we have 50 other nations against us. Since the war they've been studying our technique and perhaps the fruition of their efforts will be seen at Berlin. I am confident, however, our boys and girls will give a commendable accounting of themselves."

The team itself, insofar as the invasion of Berlin is concerned, sailed in a solvent condition. Actually it was short a little less than $2,000, but this sum has been guaranteed by reliable sources, Gustavus T. Kirby, treasurer of the committee, announced.

All told the Olympic committee still needs at least $75,000—one-third for operating expenses; one-third to meet an obligation to the permanent Olympic Association, and the remaining third to reimburse the athletes themselves, who raised that amount through loans, mortgages or the pawning of personal property.

"I shall not rest content until additional sums in the amount of another $25,000 (making $100,000 in all) are raised with which to defray the expenses of the athletes from the port of New York to their home towns," he said.

Diffenbaugh's 66 Ties Course Mark

George Diffenbaugh, diminutive Indian Spring Country Club professional, tied the unofficial professional course record for his course yesterday by blasting out a 66, 5 under par.

Playing with Volney Burnett and Earl McAleer, Diffenbaugh popped out a 32 on the first nine, and returned home in 34. It is the best round registered at Indian Spring this season.

Out Fishin' . . . . .

By Jack Hawley.

Here's the present correct dope on the temperamental blues. Remember, it may change any day, but it has been the situation for the past week, and failure to observe it has caused many a case of "fisherman's luck."

You have two choices and, unless you are willing to uselessly broil all through a hot day, you can't combine the two. We are talking about the Middles.

First choice—Get going at dawn into the channel about half way between No Point Light and Northwest Middles and watch for the schools. They are up as early as 5 or 5:30, depending on the weather. They are through by 7. Troll with feathers. And, for your own sake and that of other fishermen who are also putting out their good money, don't let any dumb or greedy boat captain run you into or through a school. That's both murder and suicide.

"There ought to be a law." You simply can't run a motor boat through a school and not send 'em down—usually for good. Circle well outside, using long lines, that will then come through the school.

After 7 you can troll blind until 9 or 10 and perhaps pick up a few. Then its all over until—

Second choice: If you can afford the present robber prices for good chum, go out at 3 p. m. to Southwest Middles and chum until sunset, and you should make a good catch.

One thing further: All who can should go during the week. At week-ends they're just too fed up from the tons of chum to make good fishing.

And lastly, phone me at Atlantic 1926 and tell me of exact results—good or bad—if you are a true sports fisherman, because we want to keep the information up to the minute, and you can't catch them all. So let's help each other get the best there is in this finest of all Chesapeake Bay sports.

Cubs Score 2-0 Decision Over Boston Bees

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—The Chicago Cubs retained their grip on the National League leadership again today by shutting out the Boston Bees, 2 to 0, in the first game of the series.

For the Bees, the defeat was but a small part of a bad afternoon. In the fifth inning, Baxter ("Buck") Jordan, Boston first baseman, was accidentally spiked on the right heel by Billy Herman, Cubs' second sacker. Jordan, who was carried from the field, will be lost to the club for at least two weeks.

The Cub second baseman had just hit into a double play. As he went into the bag he stepped on Jordan's heel. The cut required five stitches.

Grains Resume Swift Climb As Heat Holds

Wheat Advances 4¼ Cents and Corn 4 Cents in Excited Trading.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Excited price jumps ran wheat aloft the maximum limit, 5 cents, at Kansas City today and 4½ here, with corn up virtually 4 cents.

Simultaneous with the extreme rise were reports that milling interests were buying all the wheat offered in Kansas City, and that the Canadian wheat crop was deteriorating at a rapid rate, threatening to wipe out completely any yield whatever throughout wide areas.

Soaring of the corn market to almost the topmost extent allowed for any one day resulted from practical immediate failure of predictions of relief from drought and heat in the corn belt, with trade belief general that the corn crop's fate was hanging in the balance.

Am. Tel. & Tel. 2d Quarter Net Five-Year Peak

Earns $1.97 a Share Which Compares With $1.55 Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 15.—Reporting the largest June quarter net income since 1931, American Telegraph & Telephone Co., in a statement released today, showed a balance equivalent to $1.97 a share on the capital stock, against $1.55 for the three months, ended June 30, 1935.

Net income was $36,831,687, against $28,873,527 in the corresponding period last year. Walter S. Gifford, president, in a statement accompanying the figures, said earnings reflected the receipt of a 50-cent dividend from Western Electric Co., a subsidiary, the first revenue received from that source since 1931.

In a consolidated statement covering American Telephone and the subsidiary Bell companies for the three months ended May 31 there was shown net income of $45,196,739, after dividends on preferred stocks of subsidiaries, equivalent to $2.42 a share of the parent company's capital stock. For the like period last year net income was $32,153,385, or $1.72 a share.

For the 12 months ended June 30 net income of the parent company was $138,047,778, equivalent to $7.40 a share, compared with $118,865,402, or $6.37 a share, for the preceding 12 months.

Indicated net income of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. itself for the six months ended June 30, as compiled from the quarterly statements, was $71,279,565, equal to $3.81 a share, against $58,970,815, or $3.16 a share, in the first half of 1935.

Western Electric Sales.

New York, July 15 (AP).—Western Electric Co., manufacturing subsidiary of American Telephone & Telegraph Co., reported today sales of $65,651,000 for the first half of the year against $50,057,000 for the like period last year, an increase of 31 per cent.

Stocks Rise in Active Trading and Meet Profit-Taking; Government Bonds Heavy.

New York, July 15.—Government bonds turned a little sour and stocks closed with mixed prices after holding strong most of the day. Commodities held their advance. September wheat closed 2⅝ cents higher at 104⅞ cents a bushel. Turnover in stocks was close to 2,000,000 shares, the best day since April 30.

If a slight chilliness was felt in the Government bond market on the 50 per cent increase in reserve requirements, to go into effect next month, no harm was done to stocks. The momentum of the bull market increased, and in an unusually active first hour prices were carried to new high levels, the best in four or five years for most stocks.

It probably would be straining a little to suggest that the Federal Reserve Board gave the stock market a fresh shove, for on several days recently the gains have been more pronounced. At the same time some of the bulls may have seen in the Reserve board's action a hint that officials think an inflationary boom is in the making. In any event, profit taking got under way in the last hour and was heavy enough to put prices irregularly lower at the close

Utilities Climb.

Public utility stocks were the feature of the trading. The group was the busiest since March, but prices were irregular. Consolidated Edison pushed into new high ground, American Telephone, which had advanced sharply yesterday on advance knowledge of the excellent second quarter earnings, sold off today when the news became public. Rails were firm to fractionally higher. C. & O. rose 2 points to the best price since 1929. The Alleghanies were strong. Rock Islands ran forward on the reorganization plan. Norfolk & Western, the recent fast mover, fell 7½ points on one sale.

Steels reached new high ground for this movement before halting. Chrysler touched another new high and then slipped. General Motors was active and firm most of the time. Liquors were soft. Metals, sugars and farm stocks advanced.

Whatever may be first feelings of the markets toward the Federal Reserve Board's action in lifting Reserve requirements, an element of uncertainty has been injected into the situation which wasn't there yesterday. Just what the final result will be, no one now can tell. Each bank doubtless will figure out its position on the basis of the higher reserves and later decide what to do.

Federal Reserve.

The Federal Reserve Board is confident that no harm will result, but perhaps its very assurance will suggest to some people that the danger is there just the same. Time alone will tell how the matter will work out. Had the board wished it could have told the country just how many banks now have excess reserves in quantity sufficient to cover the new requirements. A recent survey by the board, published in its bulletin, shows that about two-thirds of all member banks had reserves that were more than 50 per cent in excess of requirements.

In its statement today the board simply says that "pratically all" the banks have "far more than sufficient reserves and balances with other banks to meet the increases." The joker lies with the "and balances with other banks." If enough banks find that they must call on those balances an unfavorable effect might well be had in the money and bond markets. When a bank calls a balance with another bank the second bank calls its balance with a third and so on down the line, resulting in loan and security deflation.

Bankers think that most of the balances are held in New York, where excess reserves may be heavy enough to stand a considerable withdrawal. Just the same when the calls come it may turn out that money will tighten. That certainly would be an unfavorable development, for while we have had business recovery, we have had by no means enough, and it is too early to tighten the money market, unless another turn of deflation is the aim.

Bad Method.

Most but not all the first class bankers in Wall Street are inclined to agree with the Federal Reserve Board that something should be done to cut down excess reserves, lest inflation start suddenly and get out of control. No such agreement exists with respect to the method. Many all along have felt that the lifting of the reserve requirement would be the worst way to go about it and they still feel that way, fearing that the bad means may spoil a good end.

Meanwhile Wall Street was not taken by surprise, except perhaps on the extent of the change in reserve requirements. An increase of about half that amount had been talked and the authorities have given the markets plenty of hints. On the surface, the money market looks low enough for a long time, as excess reserves will continue at a large figure; but the low point probably has been reached and that will tend to make the bond market more timid. It can only be hoped that the banks will not feel similarly in granting business loans.

Trade news at midweek was cheerful enough. Comparison of statistics on railroad freight car loadings, electric output and the like were of less value than usual because of the holiday week. Freight traffic last week moved well above the corresponding week of a year ago, which happened to contain the holiday. Electric output also was sharply higher. Steel trade reviews commented upon the exceptionally high rate of operations for summer and the good prospects for the autumn. It may yet turn out that the darkest cloud is the one just manufactured by the Federal Reserve Board in tinkering with the new toy given it under the new banking law.

Blue Chip Leader Takes $375 Dive

New York, July 15 (AP).—Texas & Pacific Land Trust (old stock), the "Bluest Chip" of the more than 1,200 issues listed on the New York stock Exchange, today gave the boardrooms a thrill by dropping $375 a share to $1,000. Only four shares, however, changed hands. The last previous sale was at $1,375 on February 18, last. The two trades were the only ones recorded this year.

New Business In Steel Gains Despite Heat

July Demand Exceeds Volume Expected by the Industry.

New York, July 15.—New business in steel shows unusual virility for midsummer in the face of an intense heat wave that has hampered production in consumers' plants as well as in the steel mills, says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. July demand for nearly all steel products has exceeded the expectations of the industry in view of the heavy bookings in June.

"Steel ingot output has gained in Pittsburgh and at Wheeling," says the summary, "though there has been a slight decline at Chicago and in the Ohio Valley, while in the Cleveland-Lorain district there has been a sharp drop to 42 per cent of capacity owing to a temporary shutdown of the National Tube Co. plant at Lorain. The gain at Pittsburgh is from 63 to 66 per cent and at Wheeling from 94 to 96 per cent, as compared with last week, the average rate for the entire country being 69 per cent, a one-point drop from a week ago.

Schedules Hold.

"Incoming business this month will not only sustain mill schedules at approximately present rates until the end of July, by which time most of the second quarter bookings will have been shipped, but is building up a backlog for August that will prevent as sharp a dip in production as had been expected.

"It is apparent that only a relatively small portion of current steel buying is actuated by fears of labor disturbances within the near future. In fact, apprehension in that respect seems to have been allayed to a considerable extent by the opposition that is being shown among steel mill employes to the unionization plan of the committee for industrial organization. Enrollment in the outside union is said to be proceeding at a pace that is disappointingly slow to its sponsors."

U. S. Shipyards Make Big Gain In 2d Quarter

With 81% Rise, 4.7% of World's Tonnage Is Under Way Here.

New York, July 15.—The upward trend in the production of merchant vessels of 100 gross tons and over continues, with a gain of 130,000 tons shown for the quarter ended June 30 last, says a statement issued today by Lloyd's Register of Shipping. Lloyd's figures cover all maritime countries except Russia, for which authentic returns are not available.

In all 1,951,005 gross tons of merchant ships are now under way. Gains during the June quarter were reported for all the leading shipbuilding nations, except France and Italy. For Great Britain and Ireland the increase was small, only about 6,000 tons, as compared with 40,000 tons for the United States and 84,000 tons for all other countries, taken as a group.

| | 1936 June 30. | Mar. 31. |
|---|---|---|
| Great Britain and Ireland | 848,732 | 842,361 |
| United States | 90,275 | 49,760 |
| Other countries | 1,011,998 | 927,993 |

Shipyards of the United States are now building 4.7 per cent of the entire world output, as compared with only 2.7 per cent in the March quarter, while the proportion for Great Britain and Ireland is 43.5 per cent as against 46.3. The other countries are producing 51.8 per cent of the total production, compared to 51 per cent in the previous quarter.

On The Air Today

Hoagy Carmichael made a personal appearance in an air show yesterday afternoon—something he never does. It came about this way:

A few days ago Midge Williams, 20-year-old colored girl who has been making rapid strides on the airways, partly under Rudy Vallee's sponsorship, telephoned Carmichael.

"We've never met," she explained, "but I've been singing your songs for years out on the West Coast. Now the N. B. C. people have brought me East. I have two programs a week on the network. I wish you could come down to the Wednesday one. I'm going to sing a whole program of your songs."

Mr. Carmichael was interested and observed he'd come if he could. (Many an artist has built a program about his songs.) Then Midge added:

Lazybones in Japanese.

"I'm going to sing 'Lazybones' in Japanese."

Well, Carmichael was there, all right. He not only was there—but he submitted to a bit of an interview.

The composer, as a matter of fact, didn't believe that Midge could actually translate such a colloquial American tune into an Oriental tongue. She not only can do just that, but she made many records for Japanese recording companies last year when making professional appearances in Tokyo, singing many American tunes in Japanese.

Not long ago she sang "Dinah" in one of Vallee's programs in her best Tokyoese. Vallee explained that in the young singer's unusual travels she had learned to sing the very popular American songs in some six or seven languages.

Next Sunday she appears in the "Magic Key." And Carmichael is starred in the new "swing series" from WJSV Saturday night as guest of Hunny Berrigan.

Who is Carmichael? He's the fellow who contributed "Star Dust" to everlasting popularity with lovers of lighter tunes, and such favorites as "Washingboard Blues," "Lazybones," the tune that Mildred Bailey used so effectively—"Ol' Rockin' Chair," the current "Sing Me a Swing Song" and many others.

High spots today:

Rex Ingram—Who played "De Lawd" in the motion picture version of "Green Pastures," guests with Vallee, WRC, at 7. Also Gregory Ratoff, of the flickers; Howard and Shelton and Judy Starr.

Virginia Rea and Jan Peerce—Guests of "Show Boat," WRC, at 8.

Experiment—Another of series of "Tomorrow's Headliners," with audience invited to show preferences for artists appearing, WJSV, at 8. Program includes a salute to WBT, Charlotte, on its fifteenth anniversary of broadcasting.

Robert Taylor—And Marjorie Gateson, of the flickers; Rose Bampton, of the Met Opera, guest for Bing Crosby, WRC, at 9.

* * * *

WJSV has decided to keep percolatin' until 1 a. m. There are times when following what appears to be the other fellow's example is distasteful. But certainly not in this instance. The WMAL "Night Watchman" show inaugurated some weeks ago, when daylight time shortened the network day for Washington stations, has proved highly successful. WOL added an extra two hours Saturday nights—Bob Hurleigh's "Sundodgers' Serenade."

Charles Godwin draws the announcing assignment for the new "Sleepy Time" midnight-to-1 a. m., show at WJSV. The plan is to offer the radio audience a soft, sweet type of music. No Benny Foodman! And that I applaud also.

Public Swing Dizzy.

Sometimes I wish the boys who handle the recorded programs weren't so smart. Actually, they know the public is a little "swing" dizzy right now but they realize that the majority apparently wants "swing." It certainly is rough on we poor mortals who find that a shot of "swing" is a good tonic but several hours a day of it is the first stage of a trip to an asylum.

Speaking for myself, I would like to see Mr. Godwin find the whole library of recordings merely sampled by Uncle Arthur Godfrey in his selections "Body and Soul" and "Goodbye Girls, I'm Through," as used currently in his "Moon Dial."

At best, "swing" music is monotonous and rasping when applied in large doses—morning, noon and night. But add this steaming weather and ye scribe's great longing is for the simple days when melody was considered the essence of smart, sophisticated musical entertainment.

Mr. Godwin has the germ of a great idea. As he says: "Just sweet music for the new 'Sleepy Time'—something you can relax to, play bridge to, sit back and really enjoy."

Foreign Exchange.

French francs held steady, but other gold currencies lost ground against the dollar in the foreig exchange market yesterday.

In New York, selling centered on Holland guilders and Swiss francs, sending the former off .05 of a cent to 68.20 cents and the latter .03 of a cent lower to 32.76 cents. French francs held unchanged at 6.63⅛ cents. Firmness was demonstrated by the British pound which edged ⅛ of a cent higher to $5.02⅝.

The dollar gained ⅛ of a cent in London to 5.02⅛ to the pound compared with the overnight New York rate of 5.02⅛. In Paris the dollar closed at 15.08½ francs (equivalent to 6.629 cents to the franc) against the New York overnight rate of 6.631 cents.

On The Air Today

Hoagy Carmichael made a personal appearance in an air show yesterday afternoon—something he never does. It came about this way:

A few days ago Midge Williams, 20-year-old colored girl who has been making rapid strides on the airways, partly under Rudy Vallee's sponsorship, telephoned Carmichael.

"We've never met," she explained, "but I've been singing your songs for years out on the West Coast. Now the N. B. C. people have brought me East. I have two programs a week on the network. I wish you could come down to the Wednesday one. I'm going to sing a whole program of your songs."

Mr. Carmichael was interested and observed he'd come if he could. (Many an artist has built a program about his songs.) Then Midge added:

Lazybones in Japanese.

"I'm going to sing 'Lazybones' in Japanese."

Well, Carmichael was there, all right. He not only was there—but he submitted to a bit of an interview.

The composer, as a matter of fact, didn't believe that Midge could actually translate such a colloquial American tune into an Oriental tongue. She not only can do just that, but she made many records for Japanese recording companies last year when making professional appearances in Tokyo, singing many American tunes in Japanese.

Not long ago she sang "Dinah" in one of Vallee's programs in her best Tokyoese. Vallee explained that in the young singer's unusual travels she had learned to sing the very popular American songs in some six or seven languages.

Next Sunday she appears in the "Magic Key." And Carmichael is starred in the new "swing series" from WJSV Saturday night as guest of Hunny Berrigan.

Who is Carmichael? He's the fellow who contributed "Star Dust" to everlasting popularity with lovers of lighter tunes, and such favorites as "Washingboard Blues," "Lazybones," the tune that Mildred Bailey used so effectively—"Ol' Rockin' Chair," the current "Sing Me a Swing Song" and many others.

High spots today:

Rex Ingram—Who played "De Lawd" in the motion picture version of "Green Pastures," guests with Vallee, WRC, at 7. Also Gregory Ratoff, of the flickers; Howard and Shelton and Judy Starr.

Virginia Rea and Jan Peerce—Guests of "Show Boat," WRC, at 8.

Experiment—Another of series of "Tomorrow's Headliners," with audience invited to show preferences for artists appearing, WJSV, at 8. Program includes a salute to WBT, Charlotte, on its fifteenth anniversary of broadcasting.

Robert Taylor—And Marjorie Gateson, of the flickers; Rose Bampton, of the Met Opera, guest for Bing Crosby, WRC, at 9.

* * * *

WJSV has decided to keep percolatin' until 1 a. m. There are times when following what appears to be the other fellow's example is distasteful. But certainly not in this instance. The WMAL "Night Watchman" show inaugurated some weeks ago, when daylight time shortened the network day for Washington stations, has proved highly successful. WOL added an extra two hours Saturday nights—Bob Hurleigh's "Sundodgers' Serenade."

Charles Godwin draws the announcing assignment for the new "Sleepy Time" midnight-to-1 a. m., show at WJSV. The plan is to offer the radio audience a soft, sweet type of music. No Benny Foodman! And that I applaud also.

Public Swing Dizzy.

Sometimes I wish the boys who handle the recorded programs weren't so smart. Actually, they know the public is a little "swing" dizzy right now but they realize that the majority apparently wants "swing." It certainly is rough on we poor mortals who find that a shot of "swing" is a good tonic but several hours a day of it is the first stage of a trip to an asylum.

Speaking for myself, I would like to see Mr. Godwin find the whole library of recordings merely sampled by Uncle Arthur Godfrey in his selections "Body and Soul" and "Goodbye Girls, I'm Through," as used currently in his "Moon Dial."

At best, "swing" music is monotonous and rasping when applied in large doses—morning, noon and night. But add this steaming weather and ye scribe's great longing is for the simple days when melody was considered the essence of smart, sophisticated musical entertainment.

Mr. Godwin has the germ of a great idea. As he says: "Just sweet music for the new 'Sleepy Time'—something you can relax to, play bridge to, sit back and really enjoy."

Court in Uproar As Mrs. Bolton Admits Killing

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 15.—Mrs. Mildred Mary Bolton, quoted by police as boasting "they just don't convict women in Cook County," admitted to judge and jury in Criminal Court today that she fired the shots which killed her husband, Joseph Bolton, jr., June 15.

Her face streaming with tears, the 46-year-old defendant, whose previous composure won her the sobriquet of "Marble Mildred," abandoned all her previous stories as she told what occurred behind the closed doors of Bolton's insurance office in the Loop.

"He called me a dirty old——, and I repeated to myself, 'just a dirty old——' after 14 years."

"What did you do next?" Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach asked.

"I picked up the gun and pointed it at him."

"How many times did you fire the gun?"

"I don't know."

"Did you go near him when he was dead?"

"Yes, I kissed him and asked the doctor if he didn't have a beautiful head."

"Did you love him?"

"Yes, always."

Mrs. Bolton's admission that she fired the shots was the climax of her story of what she said was her husband's philandering.

It was the third account she has given of the violent events of her last quarrel with her husband. Her first story to police was that he shot himself. Then she said she might have fired the pistol in a struggle with him.

A. F. Graves, Artist, Dies in Maine Home

Abbot Fuller Graves, 78, nationally known artist, died yesterday at his home, Kennebunkport, Me., of a heart attack, the Associated Press announced.

Born at Weymouth, Mass., Graves probably was best known for his paintings of colonial doorways and flower gardens.

Spy Protest

Japanese, the Admiral said he did not know.

After his arraignment Tuesday morning, Farnsworth told reporters that he had a copy of the book in his attic but that it was his personal property and "wasn't even marked confidential." Standley refused to say whether the Navy's case against the former Naval officer hinged solely on this one alleged transaction or whether other confidential Naval papers had also been sold. He indicated the extent of Farnsworth's alleged espionage activities would be brought out at his trial.

A Naval officer dismissed from the service is required to return all confidential material to the Department, the Admiral pointed out. Any confidential papers Farnsworth had would have been acquired after his court-martial in 1927, Standley said.

Others Involved.

Whether Farnsworth had accomplices, Standley said, "would have to be brought out by the evidence of the case." Later, however, the admiral made it clear the Navy did not believe Farnsworth was going it alone.

"Information regarding the activities of this man (Farnsworth) was turned over to the Department of Justice, which necessarily involved others," Standley declared.

Although J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, refused to make any comment yesterday, it was learned justice agents are still working on the case and are investigating other suspected leaks of national defense secrets to foreign powers.

Whether represetnations were to be made to the Japanese government in connection with the Farnsworth case would depend on the outcome of the trial, the admiral said.

"We'll have to wait until the evidence is submitted to trial," he added. "Then, on the basis of the evidence, it can be decided whether any formal representations should be made."

Cites Phone Call.

The Japanese Embassy has denied all knowledge of Farnsworth or of any Japanese naval officer or diplomat having any transactions with him. Capt. Tamon Tamaguchi, naval attache, reported yesterday that on Saturday a man had telephoned the embassy and given the name of "Farnsworth" and demanded money in connection with the Thompson case. The demand, Yamaguchi said, "of course was refused." Apart from this incident, he had never heard of the naval officer.

Meanwhile, the central figure in this spy case that is unprecedented in the annals of the Navy, remained in the District Jail under the care of a physician. Although Farnsworth still seemed shaken yesterday morning by the ordeal of the last two days, jail physicians said his condition was not serious but mostly "a case of nerves."

In the morning he was visited by Franklin K. Lane, local attorney and a member of the Howell Aviation Commission appointed by President Roosevelt in 1934. Lane explained he was a close friend of the Farnsworth family, having known the officer for more than 25 years and having served as usher at his wedding in Annapolis in 1915. He said he called to offer the accused officer any assistance he might need.

Farnsworth refused to see newspapermen, sending out a note that he had been advised not to say anything or answer questions until he had obtained a lawyer. He was reported to be contacting friends to assist him in securing a lawyer and to help him raise the $10,000 bond on which he is being held.

tions of jurisdiction and to make decisions in direct conflict with those of the executive council and the conventions.

"2. That the organizations who participated in the formation of the C. I. O. and who now hold membership therein are engaged in fostering, maintaining and supporting a dual movement, and in fomenting insurrection within the A. F. of L.

"3. That each organization of the C. I. O. has violated the contract which each entered into with the A. F. of L. when granted certificates of affiliation.

"4. That the C. I. O. is acting in violation of and in opposition to the decisions of the Atlantic City convention of the A. F. of L., and that its acts constitute rebellion against the administrative and organization policies adopted by a majority of the conventions of the A. F. of L."

In the meantime, from Chicago came reports of the "first break" of the company unions into the ranks of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, one of the C. I. O. unions.

Van A. Bittner, Western regional director of the steel workers' organizing committee for the C. I. O., announced, according to the Associated Press, that "3,000 members of the 'employes' representation plan' of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co. plant in South Chicago came over in a body to the Amalgamated."

Bittner said this employes' representation plan was "the biggest company union west of Pittsburgh." The workers were originally organized by the company, he said, "but they got out of control."

"Three thousand men coming over in a body means the complete organization of the entire plant in a very short time," he said. There are 13,000 men in the plant.

Bittner said that nothing but verbal opposition from the employers had yet been met.

Lewis, at an address earlier at the National Press Club, told 500 newsmen and their guests he proposed, through organization of workers, "to let more Americans in on the proposition of running this country." He said the steel organization plan would continue "regardless of whether opposition comes from the Iron and Steel Institute, the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce or the American Federation of Labor."

In the background of the continued threats by the executive council members to suspend Lewis and his C. I. O., and their lack of action in the matter, there is the primary factor that suspension would cost the federation one-third of its membership of about 3,000,000 and one-third of its annual revenue, derived chiefly from a 1-cent per month tax on each union member.

Suspect to Return.

Reno, Nev., July 15 (U.P.).—Claude H. Knowlton, 45, employed as a teller in a Salem, Mass., bank for 20 years, will return voluntarily to face charges of embezzling $25,570, he told United States Attorney E. P. Carville today. Arrested last night, Knowlton was held pending filing of removal proceedings in Federal court.

2 Puerto Rican Visitors to Ask Inquiry in Trial

Women Here to Appeal to the President; Charge 'Frame-up' on Revolt.

Determined to voice their appeal to President Roosevelt, even if they "have to wait two weeks," Martha Lomar and Genoveva de Arteaga arrived here yesterday from Puerto Rico to plead for an investigation of the trial of eight Puerto Rican Nationalists, now in progress.

The eight, charged with conspiring to overthrow the United States Government, are victims of a "frame-up by the vested interests, especially the sugar industry's overlords," both women believe.

Miss Lomar is president of the Women's United Front for a Constitutional Convention of the Republic of Puerto Rico. According to her the organization, which includes 90 per cent of all women in the island, recognizes no party lines.

"I am a Socialist and Miss de Arteaga is a Democrat," she said. "Women of all parties have joined in this one big movement to seek independence for Puerto Rico. We are united now in trying to secure justice for the Nationalists on trial."

The men of the island also are united for a similar purpose, the visitors said. While in Washington they will try to see Attorney General Cummings and Secretary of the Interior Ickes to ask for an investigation of the grand jury which brought the indictment against the Nationalist leaders.

Most of the members of the grand jury, according to the two women, were continental Americans.

"They constitute a closed colony in Puerto Rico and are enemies of our independence," said Miss Lomar.

According to both women the majority of the island's inhabitants prefer statehood to complete independence.

"But," they said," when the Tydings bill was introduced we could see that we would never become a State and so now we want independence. We do not want a colonial form of government. That is easy to understand when the abuses under the present system are considered."

The Nationalist movement, headed by Albizú Campos, is composed of the intelligentsia and is small in numbers, Miss Lomar explained.

"However," she added, "it has succeeded in making a nationalist of every Puerto Rican in feeling and conviction."

Both women declared the vested interests in the island have spread propaganda in the United States to the effect that nationalism is based on race hatred.

Guards Respect Albizu's Oath He Is Unarmed

By the Associated Press.

San Juan, P. R., July 15.—Guards at the trial of eight Nationalists accused of conspiring to overthrow the Government by force took the leading defendant's "word as a gentleman" today that he was not carrying arms.

After virtually everyone attending the hearings had been searched for weapons, the guards began to examine Pedro Albizu Campos, leader of the Puerto Rican Nationalist Party. Albizu objected, saying:

"On my honor as a gentleman, I am not armed."

He was permitted to enter the court without further ado.

Albizu, who is chief defense counsel for himself and his seven colleagues, protested in vain against the reading of Nationalist newspaper editorials which urged Puerto Ricans to "hate Yankees" and "arm yourselves" for freedom from the United States.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, former national director of prohibition in the United States, read the excerpts, which were taken from La Falabra, a newspaper owned by Juan Antonio Corretjer, one of the defendants.

Woodcock, like Albizu, a Harvard graduate, chatted with the Nationalist leader before the session opened and assured him of a fair trial. Woodcock is special Government counsel.

High fashion . . . because every style was adapted from models approved by the Paris fashion authorities. Every style was completely checked for smart detail by our own experienced stylists. Low prices—because we urged the furriers and makers to work early and avoid the rise in the fur market.
